YETHOLM, LINTON AND MOREBATTLE.

THE parish of YETHOLM is bounded on the south by the English border, and divided into nearly equal parts by the water of Bowmont; the surface is hilly, but covered with verdure, and is pastured by numerous flocks of sheep; there are considerable haughs (or meadows) on the banks of the Bowmont; the soil is good, and adapted for wheat. The parish comprises two villages, or rather a village in two parts, situate on either side of the Bowmont: that on the west side, called 'Town-Yetholm,' is about eight miles south of Kelso; the other, designated 'Kirk-Yetholm,' stands at the distance of about half a mile on the other side of the stream: both are humble in appearance, especially the latter, which is chiefly inhabited by gypsies—a race formerly remarkable for their disorderly lives and dangerous characters, and at this day distinguished by peculiarity of habits from the general body of the community; the close proximity to the border, most likely, induced the settlement of the gypsies in this locality. Each village is governed by a baron baillie, having the power of holding baillie courts as occasion may require. Till lately, the oldest thatched church in Scotland was standing in this parish; it is now replaced by an elegant edifice of black stone, the windows and corners being faced with white. Besides the church, there are two meeting-houses in Town-Yetholm—one for original burghers, the other for an united secession congregation. Annual fairs are held, on the 27th of June for sheep and cattle, and on the 5th July and 31st October for cattle, lambs and wool; there are also several minor markets.

LINTON is a strictly agricultural parish, extending nine miles in length by three in breadth—bounded by Sprouston on the north, Northumberland on the east, Eckford on the west, and Yetholm and Morebattle on the south; it is separated from the latter parish by the Kaile: besides that stream, it has two small lochs, one of which abounds with trout, the other with eels. The land, which rises from the Kaile, is under the best system of cultivation.

The parish of MOREBATTLE is about nine miles in length, by a mean breadth of four; it is bounded by Linton and Yetholm on the north, Eckford on the west, Hownam on the south, and the county of Northumberland on the east. The greater part of the land is hilly and pastoral, the low grounds only being arable. The Kaile and Bowmont run through the parish; both waters affording excellent sport to the angler. Near the former stream, at the distance of seven miles from Kelso and ten from Jedburgh, stands the village. The ancient and more correct mode of spelling the name is Morebatle, which signifies the 'dwelling-place at the marsh.' The vestiges of ancient camps, and various ruins, particularly Whitton Castle and Corbet House, indicate this parish to have been the frequent scene of warfare.

SELKIRKSHIRE.

THIS small county, of irregular form, is situate in the south of Scotland; bounded by Roxburghshire on the east and south-east, on the west by the counties of Dumfries and Peebles, and on the south and south-west by Dumfries-shire. The county extends twenty-seven miles from south-west to north-east, and is sixteen miles in breadth, exclusive of a small detached part on the east: its area comprehends 263 square miles, or 168,320 statute acres; about 11,000 acres may be considered as under cultivation, exclusive of upwards of 1,300 more acres occupied as gardens and pleasure-grounds. This border county was formerly designated the 'Sheriffdom of Ettrick Forest,' from being in a great measure the vale of the Ettrick and its tributary streams, and from its being covered with wood; it was stocked with large herds of deer, and formed a favourite scene for the enjoyment of the chase by the Scottish monarchs. In many of the royal charters it is entitled 'The Forest;' and before regular sheriffs were appointed it was placed under the jurisdiction of a keeper, who generally held the office of constable of the King's Castle at Selkirk. The ancient history of this county is so intimately associated with that of Roxburghshire (already briefly detailed), that but few incidents worthy of special notice exclusively belong to the district. Unlike Roxburghshire, this county contains few or no remains of ecclesiastical establishments—though it possesses a number of ruined 'keeps,' the seats of feudal strength; and among other objects worthy the inspection of the antiquary is a large portion of a stupendous work of the Romanized Britons, called the 'Catrail,' once a vast fosse, having a rampart on either side, constructed during the fifth century as a strong line of defence against the invading Saxons.

SURFACE, PRODUCE, MANUFACTURES, &c.—With the exception of a very narrow portion on its eastern side, the county may be said to be a continued alternation of hill and dale, and many of the eminences rise to a considerable height. The principal vales are those of the Ettrick and Yarrow, besides a portion of the vale of the Tweed and the Gala; from these valleys there shoot out many 'cleughs' and 'hopes,' that run up for some distance between the heights: these vales, as well as the waters (noticed hereafter) which pour through them, have been repeatedly the theme of the Scottish as well as the English lyrists. Around Galashiels and Selkirk the hills are now subjected to the plough, and in these situations wheat is raised at a considerable elevation above the level of the sea. In the upper valleys of Ettrick and Yarrow, tillage is confined to the haughs and low grounds contiguous. Throughout the county generally, agriculture is as well understood and practised as in any district of the kingdom. Great attention is paid to sheep farming, and the improvement of the breed of sheep: this has been stimulated, and kept up with great success, by the praiseworthy exertions of Lord Napier, who at the termination of the war betook himself to the vale of Ettrick, and commenced farming, as a rational amusement. The shire is almost wholly stocked with white-faced sheep, except a high tract of country towards the sources of its rivers, of which Hindhope on the Ettrick, and Lawd-hope on the Yarrow, are the lowest points. Of minerals, none of the more useful have yet been found in this pastoral county, it being equally deficient in coal, lime and sandstone; in some parts, however, abundance of whinstone is obtained, and a good deal of granite. The MANUFACTURES of this county, which will be more particularly noticed in the directory of Selkirk and Galashiels, consist, in the former town, of woollen goods and hosiery; and in Galashiels, also of woollen goods to a large extent, including blankets and flannels, together with the tanning of leather and the dressing of sheep and lamb skins.

RIVERS, LAKES and MOUNTAINS.—The county is well watered by the ETTRICK, the YARROW and the TWEED: the latter valuable river, after draining Peebles-shire, intersects the northern extremity of Selkirkshire from west to east, during a placid course in a deep channel of nine miles; when it is joined by the Ettrick, and, also receiving the Gala, passes on to Roxburghshire. The Gala cannot be esteemed a river of this county; it takes its rise in the parish of Heriot, in the county of Edinburgh, and, flowing through a portion of Roxburghshire, falls into the Tweed about a mile below Galashiels. The Yarrow has its source at a place called Yarrow Cleugh, near the rise of the Moffat water, in Dumfries-shire, and falls into the Ettrick two miles above Selkirk. The county has some small LAKES, the chief being St. Mary's Loch and the Loch of the Lowes, lying at the head of the Yarrow. The principal MOUNTAINS, with their altitude above the level of the sea, are—Blackhouse Hills, 2,370 feet; Windlestrae Law, 2,295; Law Kneis, 1,990; the Three Brethren, 1,978; Black Andrew, 1,966; Pentlaw, 1,964; Wardlaw, 1,900; Minchmoor, 1,877; Hangingshaw Law, 1,780; and Peatlaw, 1,557.

The county of Selkirk contains only three complete parishes, namely, Ettrick, Stow and Yarrow; but has portions of seven other parochial divisions. The only towns are those of Selkirk and Galashiels—the former a Royal Burgh, but not represented in parliament; the COUNTY, however, returns one member to the legislature.

TOTAL POPULATION OF SELKIRKSHIRE.....							5070	5889	6633	6833	1440

Note.—(a) Ashkirk parish is mostly in Roxburghshire; the entire parish contains 597 inhabitants.
 (b) Galashiels forms part of the parish of Lindean-with-Galashiels, in Roxburghshire; the whole contains 1,534 persons.
 (c) Innerleithen parish, which is mostly in Peebleshire, contains 810 inhabitants.
 (d) Peebles parish is mostly in Peebleshire, where it is wholly entered.
 (e) Robertown is mostly, and Selkirk partly in Roxburghshire; the former parish contains 1,268—the latter 2,883 persons.
 (f) There were no returns made for Stow parish in the year 1801. The population (323,) in 1831 must be deducted from the amount of that column to make the total increase correspond.

The total annual value of Real Property, in this county, as assessed in April, 1815, amounted to £43,584.

GALASHIELS

As a modern manufacturing town, and burgh of barony, in the parish of its name, which lies partly in the shire of Selkirk and partly in that of Roxburgh, and is cut in two parts by the Tweed. The town is situated upon the right bank of the Gala, about a mile above the confluence of that river with the Tweed, at the distance of 31 miles s. s. e. of Edinburgh, 18 e. of Peebles, 6 n. of Selkirk, 5 n. w. of Melrose, and 30 s. by w. of Berwick-upon-Tweed. The old village of Galashiels is now nearly abandoned, but still contains the church, the manse, a secession chapel, and a few respectable houses. The present town is comparatively of modern erection, having been begun but little more than sixty years since; it consists of one long street, with some lanes and scattered clusters of houses, chiefly built of blue whinstone and slated. The river Gala is here crossed by three bridges—one of stone, the other two wire suspension bridges; one of the latter was constructed in 1813 by a Mr. Richard Lees, assisted by a blacksmith—and this bridge was the first, upon the American suspension principle, erected in Scotland.

The manufacture of woollen cloth, blankets, flannels, tartans and shawls, is carried on here to a most important extent, and forms a very prominent feature of mercantile industry; a great quantity of woollen yarn is spun; and the weaving of stockings, the tanning of leather, and the dressing of sheep and lamb skins, are branches that engage considerable attention. The manufacturers and weavers meet annually, on the 11th of October, for the purpose of electing deacons of their trades. Branches of the Leith Banking Company and of the National Bank of Scotland are settled here. Although labouring under the serious disadvantage of having expensive inland carriage, and being at a considerable distance from coal, yet Galashiels, by the activity and perseverance of its inhabitants, has become one of the most thriving towns in the south of Scotland, and is much on the increase, many new buildings being in the course of erection, among which is a chapel of ease to the established church. A railway is contemplated to be laid down betwixt Newcastle-upon-Tyne and Glasgow; should this be carried into effect, much advantage is anticipated by this town, as the projected line will pass either through Galashiels or very near to it. The inhabitants (who are of a friendly and enlightened character) support an extensive subscription library and a news-room; and there is a letter-press printing establishment in the town. Fairs are held on the third Wednesday of March, 8th of July, 10th of October, and the third Wednesday of November.

SELKIRK,

WITH THE NOBILITY, GENTRY AND CLERGY IN THE PARISHES OF ASHKIRK, ETTRICK AND YARROW.

SELKIRK is an ancient town, a royal burgh, the capital of the county and parish of its name, and the seat of a presbytery; 36 miles s.s.e. of Edinburgh, 22 E. by s of Peebles, 12 N. N.W. of Hawick, 8 s. w. of Melrose, and 6 s. of Galashiels; occupying a rising ground, at the foot of which flows the river Ettrick. The place derives its name from a kirk that was established here at an early date, when the locality became distinguished as a hunting-seat of the king. In the oldest charter it is called Seleschirche, Sele-chyre, or Sel-chire, which signify 'the great' or 'the good church.' When a second kirk was erected in the vicinity, after the foundation of a monastery by David I, in 1113, the prior place received the dignified title of Selkirk Regis, while the village of the monks was denominated Selkirk Abbatis: the monks of Selkirk did not, however, remain long settled in the town; they were removed to a more pleasing locality by their royal patron. Of the castle of Selkirk, at which David occasionally resided, little is known, and its site cannot now be satisfactorily ascertained. Formerly, Selkirk exhibited but an indifferent appearance in its buildings and their arrangement; within these fifteen or twenty years, however, a spirit of improvement has been developed which has imparted to the place an aspect far more prepossessing: the streets have been levelled, many handsome private houses built, and a new town-house (surmounted by a handsome spire) erected, containing apartments for the burgh and sheriff's court, public meetings, &c.; a new gaol has also been built, on the north side of the town; and the streets and principal shops are now lighted with gas.

Selkirk was in past ages celebrated for the making of brogues (a description of single-soled shoe); tradition carries the existence of this trade so far back as the period of the battle of Flodden, in which conflict, it is asserted, the brogue makers of Selkirk took a distinguished part: as a further proof of the consequence and ability of the professors of this craft, it appears from the town records that when the Highland army, in 1745, commanded the magistrates of Edinburgh to furnish six thousand pairs of shoes, these civic officials made a call upon the burgh of Selkirk for no less than a third of the quantity, which was supplied, and, soon after, a few hundreds more. This branch has greatly declined at the present day, though there are still a good number engaged in it. The principal manufactures now carried on consist of various descriptions of woollen goods, as cloths, blankets, flannels, tartans, and lambs' wool hosiery—together with the spinning of woollen yarn, in which latter process two very extensive mills, lately erected, are employed. The town possesses two principal inns, and an equal number of banking establishments—the one a branch of the British Linen Company's bank, the other of the National Bank of Scotland; there is also a bank for savings. The introduction of manufactures has caused a great augmentation of the population of the town, and consequently a material extension of its ancient limits.

As a royal burgh, Selkirk is governed by two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, fourteen merchant councillors and fifteen trades' councillors, who are chosen annually at Michaelmas, or on the Wednesday following. A justice of peace court is held monthly, on the first Tuesday, for the recovery of debts not exceeding £10., and other public business; a town court is held by the magistrates on Tuesday and Friday, also for the recovery of debts and other business connected with the burgh; and the lieutenantcy hold their meetings on the last Tuesday of July, and in the months of September and October following, for the purpose of preparing the annual militia lists of the county.

The places for public worship are a church of the establishment and a chapel for seceders. The institutions for education in Selkirk are of a most judicious character; they comprise, besides the parochial school, burgh and grammar schools, a sabbath evening school, and two boarding academies. The inhabitants support a public library, and there is a friendly society. The general scenery, in the vicinity of Selkirk, is very delightful: the rivers Ettrick and Yarrow form a junction, and empty their waters into the Tweed, about a mile west of the town; the beautiful villa of Bowhill (belonging to the Duke of Buccleugh), the stately ruins of Newark Castle, the fertile straths, and the serpentine windings of the two rivers, together with many elegant mansions, form beautifully romantic and highly diversified scenery. The weekly market is held on Wednesday; and the fairs take place on the 5th April, 15th July, 31st October, and 19th December.

POST OFFICE, Market-place, SELKIRK, Miss Buckham, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive every forenoon at eleven, and are despatched at the same hour.

STIRLINGSHIRE,

ONE of the most important and beautiful counties in Scotland, is situate partly in the Highlands and partly in the Lowlands; bounded on the east by the county of Linlithgow and the river Forth, on the south and west by Dumbartonshire, on the north by the shires of Perth and Clackmannan (which latter county touches it also on the east), and on the south and south-east by a portion of Lanarkshire. Its boundaries are in many places distinctly marked by water-courses or lakes—the principal boundary-line on the north being the Forth, the Avon on the east, the Kelvin river on the south, the Endrick water on the south-west, and Loch Lomond on the west. The figure of the county is extremely singular, and has been fancifully likened both to a fish and a serpent: its tail, which diminishes to an apex at the north, is inserted between the counties of Dumbarton and Perth; and its head is suddenly turned towards the shires of Lanark (on the south) and Linlithgow on the south-east. Its length from east to west is thirty-six miles—but, following the curvature of its form, from east to its northern point it will measure upwards of forty-five miles; its breadth varies from twelve to twenty miles, except where it declines towards the north, and here the distance across is very trifling. The shire comprises an area of four hundred and eighty-nine square miles, or 312,960 statute acres of land, of which nearly two-thirds are under cultivation.

This county, from its situation between the friths of Forth and Clyde, and on the direct passage from the northern to the southern parts of the island, has been the scene of many memorable transactions; and there are few counties where monuments of antiquity are so frequently to be met with; neither does it yield to any in point of modern improvements, or in the beauties of scenery. The wall of Antoninus, built for the purpose of protecting the Roman conquests on the south, traversed the lower division of the county, and has left some slight traces for the investigation of the antiquary; the remains of Roman forts are also distinguishable, and weapons and coins of that invading power have been occasionally dug out of the soil. After the overthrow of the Pictish sovereignty, Stirlingshire, with all the country upon the south side of the Forth, was for some years under the dominion of the Northumbrian Saxons; and at a later date it passed quietly under the government of the Scottish sovereigns. Subsequently considerable importance was attached to the county from the position and strength of the castle of Stirling (which we shall notice more particularly under the head of its locality), commanding, as it did, the most important pass betwixt the northern and southern districts of the kingdom. In the twelfth century it was much benefitted by David I, who erected religious houses, particularly that at Cambuskenneth, within its bounds; and the inmates of these establishments being generally learned men, their pious authority tended to civilize the rude manners of the population.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, MINERALS, MANUFACTURES, &c.—This county, as has been said, is partly Highland and partly Lowland. The former, which is in the western quarter, and adjacent to Loch Lomond, is a mountainous district; here the majestic Ben Lomond rises to the height of more than three thousand feet. East from this Highland part, the land becomes flattish, or gently inclining towards the Forth or the Endrick. In the centre of the county the ground is again elevated into a series of hills, of which those of greatest altitude are from thirteen to fifteen hundred feet in height; from one of these eminences, in Kilsyth parish, there is obtained one of the finest views in Scotland; it is computed to embrace an extent of 12,000 square miles. Many of the hills in the central, and more especially in the southern division, have their sides and even their summits clothed with a fine green sward, which affords excellent pasture for sheep. The eastern division of the county consists of beautiful carse land, in many places quite flat, and in others presenting a succession of inclined planes, gradually rising towards the south from the rich vale of the Forth. In this quarter the country has experienced improvements of the most extensive and beneficial character; and it now exhibits the pleasing spectacle of fertile meadows, fields in the highest state of tillage, with plantations, pleasure grounds, gardens and orchards, all in the most exuberant vegetation and fruitfulness. Almost every variety of soil to be met with in Scotland occurs in Stirlingshire; but the most common and the most fertile in the county is the alluvial or carse land, which occupies many thousands of acres on the banks of the Forth; in this species of soil there are beds of shells, clay, marl and moss. In the western and central districts, on the banks of the rivers, the land is generally of a light and gravelly description; while patches of rich loam present their surface to the husbandman in other parts of the county. From the great variety of the soil, the system of agriculture in Stirlingshire naturally cannot be uniform, nor its produce equally abundant or limited to any particular species: large crops of wheat, barley, beans, peas, turnips, potatoes, &c., are raised; the culture of artificial grasses has also been very generally adopted in this county. The extensive ranges of moor in the upland district are exclusively devoted to the feeding of numerous flocks of sheep, which are of the old black-faced or Highland breed; there are but few cattle reared, the county being sufficiently supplied by the drovers from the Highlands. Stirlingshire is inferior to few districts of Scotland in the quantity and variety of its MINERAL productions, the most abundant of which are coal, ironstone, limestone and sandstone. The principal coal-pits are in the southern base of the Lennox hills; but this valuable article is also obtained in the eastern district, in the vicinity of the Forth and Clyde Canal: the county produces such quantities of this mineral as not only to be sufficient for home consumption, but, by means of the Union Canal, to supply the metropolis. The ironstone, limestone and sandstone are found in the same districts with the coal. Veins of silver were discovered and wrought about seventy years ago, but the working of them was soon discontinued; copper, lead and cobalt have likewise been raised at different periods, but not to any considerable amount. The grand staple MANUFACTURE of this county is iron goods, both cast and malleable, the chief seat of which is at CARRON, near Falkirk. The making of nails for carpenters' work is also carried on, in several parishes (especially in that of St. Ninians), to a valuable extent; at St. Ninians are likewise manufactured carpets and tartans; at Stirling, tartans and shawls; and at Bannockburn (ever memorable for the decisive defeat of the army of Edward by the triumphant Bruce) carpets are manufactured; while in other towns and localities are calico printing works, large distilleries, tanneries, breweries, and chymical establishments.

RIVERS and MOUNTAINS.—The FORTH is the principal river in Stirlingshire; it takes its rise from a spring near the summit of Ben Lomond, and, after receiving in its course the Teith, the Allan and the Devon, expands into that noble estuary called the Firth of Forth. Between Stirling and Alloa, a distance of only seven miles in a direct line, the stretch is more than twenty by the course of the river, owing to numerous windings, which are termed 'the links of the Forth.' The next river in magnitude is the CARRON; it has its source in the central district, and is navigable for vessels of large burden for about two miles from the place where it forms a junction with the Forth. The other streams are the AVON, the ENDRICK, the BLANE and the KELVIN, none of which, however, require particular notice. Besides these waters, the county enjoys the advantage of the Forth and Clyde canal and the Union navigation, which is of paramount importance to the commerce of this productive and flourishing district. The EMINENCES of greatest altitude above the level of the sea are—Ben Lomond (before mentioned), 3,262 feet; Alva Hill, 1,600; and Campsie Fells, 1,500.

Stirlingshire comprises twenty-two complete parishes, and portions of four others. It contains two parliamentary burghs—STIRLING (which is a Royal Burgh) and FALKIRK: the former joins with Culross, Queensferry, Dunfermline and Inverkeithing, in returning a member to the legislature; and Falkirk is associated in representation with Linlithgow, Lanark, Airdrie and Hamilton. The county, of course, deposes a third representative.

Note.—(a) The parishes of Kippen and Leacroft are partly in Perthshire; the former contains 2,085 inhabitants—the latter 443. (b) Logie parish is partly in the shire of Clackmannan, extending also into that of Perth, and contains 1,945 inhabitants. (c) A small portion of Stirling parish is in the shire of Clackmannan; the whole parish contains 8,556 inhabitants.

The total annual value of Real Property in this county, as assessed in April, 1815, amounted to £218,761.

AIRTH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

AIRTH is an ancient village in the parish of its name, 27 miles w. of Edinburgh, between 8 and 9 E. of Stirling, and 5 N.W. of Falkirk; situate on the banks of the Forth, nearly opposite to Kennet Pans, and was, at one period, a place of considerable importance, but is now greatly decayed; it, however, possesses a handsome new church, which, as seen from the Forth, half hid amidst the surrounding trees, presents a scene of much rural beauty. There are three small ports or harbours on the Forth, into which vessels of light burden can enter, and two ferries across that estuary, at which are boats for the transport of cattle, carriages, &c. to Alloa, and other places on the Fife side. The salmon fishery is prosecuted here with considerable success; and the coal mines, of which there are several in the neighbourhood affords employment to many of the labouring class. The beautiful and romantic seat of William Graham, esq. is well worthy of notice. The Earl of Dunmore has an elegant mansion here in the pure Gothic style, and few buildings are superior to it either in chaste simplicity of architecture or elegance of design. In the parish there are three ancient towers, one at Airth, another at Dunmore, a third at Powfowls; that at Airth is of very early date, and is called Wallace's tower, from the circumstance of that hero having privily entered the building, slew the captain and one hundred men, and relieved his uncle, who was a prisoner—the tower is still in tolerable preservation. Some years ago an anchor was found in Dunmore hill, at least half a mile from the present course of the river. The whole parish, with the exception of the hills of Airth and Dunmore (both of which are beautiful and well-wooded) is a level tract.

BALFRON, BUCHANNAN AND DRYMEN.

BALFRON is a neat manufacturing village in the parish of its name, 19 miles from Glasgow, the like distance from Stirling, and 17 from Dumbarton; agreeably situate on the declivity of a hill. The houses are, for the most part, well built, and very nearly all whitewashed—the appearance of the place is that of cleanliness and respectability. The Ballindaloch cotton spinning works, the property of Messrs. Finlay and Co. furnish employment to a considerable number of the inhabitants, chiefly females, whose general clean and healthful appearance may be ascribed to the salutary regulations enforced in the establishment of this respectable firm. These gentlemen have also erected a convenient building for the purpose of an evening school, in which the children of persons employed in their works receive gratuitous instruction. There are many weavers employed here by the Glasgow manufacturers, in connexion with whom are some resident agents. A branch of the British Linen Company's Bank is settled in the village. An annual fair is held on the third Tuesday of May, old style.

The parish of BUCHANNAN lies in the western extremity of the county, and is mountainous and moorish. The river Forth rises in the district, at the bank of Ben Lomond, and the Endrick water intersects the parish. Buchanan House, the seat of the Duke of Montrose, stands on the eastern margin of Loch Lomond; and the foot of Inversnaid, near the head of the lake.

DRYMEN parish lies on the south-eastern shore of Loch Lomond, into which runs the river Endrick below the village of Drymen. In this village resided Lord Napier, the inventor of the celebrated logarithms.

DENNY AND DUNIPACE.

DENNY is a thriving and increasing village in the parish of its name, 29 miles w. of Edinburgh, 20 N. E. of Glasgow, 7 s. of Stirling, and 5 w. of Falkirk; situate on the south bank of the Carron, on the road directly west from Falkirk, through the centre of the county, the road from Stirling to Glasgow also passing through the village. The parish is intersected by the Clyde and Forth canal, which is of great benefit to the agriculturists as well as the manufacturers of the district. The banks of the Carron were the scene of many of the most interesting and heroic deeds recorded in Scottish history, but are now that of active industry, and a source of wealth to the surrounding country: the uncommon extent of the water power, as well as the purity of the stream, has caused the establishment of very considerable works on its margin, comprising paper, woollen and dye-wood mills, and print works; in the vicinity are also chymical works, two distilleries, a bleachfield, and a manufactory for spades and shovels; the whole furnishing employment to a large and industrious population, and causing a great circulation of money through an important district. The village of Denny has been greatly improved of late; the houses are generally well built, and the aspect of the place is neat, clean and healthful. The inhabitants support a public library, and the provident classes a savings' bank; there is an association connected with the district, called 'the Denny and Dunpace Horticultural Society;' a handsome building, for a masonic lodge; was some years since erected here by the brethren of the Denny-Lonehead and St. Andrew's lodges. The village contains a population of about 2,600 persons, of whom a thousand are said to be employed in the printing works. Two fairs are held here annually—one on the Wednesday before the 12th May, the other on the Wednesday after the 11th November.

DUNIPACE parish is divided into the four districts of Little Denovan, Meikle Denovan, Dunipace, and Torwood. This locality is rendered famous, in the works of most Scottish topographers, from possessing two mounts, called 'the Hills of Dunipace,' the origin of which, or the purposes to which they were devoted, have exercised the ingenuity and stimulated the researches of antiquaries: the common traditional account is, that they were erected as monuments of a peace, concluded upon their site, between the Romans and Caledonians; but there are strong reasons for presuming that they are sepulchral memorials. It was at Dunipace that Edward I, of England, on the 14th of October, 1301, signed a warrant to his ambassadors, then in France, authorizing them to consent to a truce with the Scots, as an indispensable preliminary towards a peace with their ally, the French king, between whom and Edward a destructive war had long been waged.

FALKIRK,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF CAMELON AND LAURISTOUN, AND THE PARISHES OF BOTHKENNAR, MUIRAVONSIDE, POLMONT AND SLAMANAN.

FALKIRK is an ancient town, and the capital of the eastern district of the county, as it is of the parish to which it gives name; 24 miles w. of Edinburgh, 22 n.e. of Glasgow, 11 s.e. of Stirling, and three from Grangemouth; delightfully situate on the face of an eminence, overlooking the broad expanse of country called 'the Carse of Falkirk,' and commanding a most extensive prospect, which, for beauty of landscape, is scarcely equalled in any part of Scotland: the views comprise (besides the rich and fertile 'carse,' which is cultivated to the highest degree of perfection, and interspersed with villages and numerous gentlemen's seats), the majestic river Forth, covered with almost countless vessels passing to and from the thrifty ports of Grangemouth, Alloa, Kincardine, &c., and also up and down the great canal, which intersects the country about half a mile north of the town; a mile further, in the same direction, a contrast strikes the vision—from the Carron iron-works ascend volumes of flame and smoke, assuming the semblance of the awful workings of a volcano: to the distance of ten or twelve miles, east, north and west, the prospect is unbroken, presenting a panorama of loveliness, grandeur and active life rarely to be paralleled; while to the south it is bounded by Callander wood, shrouding a rising ground a short distance from the town. Few situations more eligible for rendering a place handsome could have been selected: as it is, the town has a very good appearance; it consists of (excluding a number of back streets and wynds) one principal street, which is long and wide, and upon the whole not irregular; in general the houses are well built, of hewn stone; and the town, which is now lighted with gas, has been ornamented with a very elegant steeple, one hundred and forty-six feet high, in which are two bells (one of them very large) and a clock. From its local position, Falkirk has a gentle declivity on every side, which tends to its general cleanliness; the air is dry and pure, and its circulation free; and an abundant supply of the finest water is conveyed to the town, in pipes, from the heights to the southward: as a place of residence it is pleasant and salubrious; and the social, free and agreeable manners of all ranks of society render it peculiarly attractive. A number of elegant villas have within these few years been erected towards the north of the town; they form a handsome terrace, about half a mile in length—uniting to the town the villages of Grahamston and Barnsford, and forming a continuous double line of upwards of a mile in extent. The town recognizes no municipal authority: its inhabitants have been long celebrated for a manly spirit of independence, both political and religious, combined with a liberality of sentiment and sociality of intercourse seldom witnessed elsewhere; little or no distinction is made between persons of rank and wealth and those necessarily operative—all associate as engaged in one common friendly pursuit; and with regard to moral conduct and the paucity of crime, the population of this town can fearlessly stand a comparison with any other in Britain of equal amount.

Falkirk, as it is situate in a very populous district, with no town of consideration contiguous, commands an extensive inland trade; as there is no market held in the seven or eight surrounding parishes, and the Carron iron-works (from which the town derives material support) are only about two miles north from Falkirk, it is the market town for between thirty and forty thousand people. The shops are handsome, and well stored with every necessary and even luxury of life. Under the head of manufactures, we may mention that connected with the leather trade in tanning and currying, the making of bricks and tiles, malting, with two distilleries and an equal number of ropewalks. Besides the famous Carron works, there are at Grahamston extensive foundries, belonging to the Falkirk Iron Company; and in the neighbourhood are flour mills and valuable coal works. The Union canal joins the Forth and Clyde canal about a mile west from the town, but its principal trade is limited to the conveyance of passengers and coals to Edinburgh; it passes under ground, about half a mile south of the town, through a tunnel seven hundred and ninety-six yards in length. The general trade and commerce of the town and its neighbourhood are assisted by three banking establishments, namely, a branch of the Bank of Scotland, one of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and another of the National Bank of Scotland.

Falkirk was formerly a burgh of regality; but when the feudal jurisdictions were abrogated, after the rebellion of 1745, it was changed into a burgh of barony, but no baron bailie has been appointed for many years: the internal regulations of the town are vested in a body of 'stent masters,' chosen by the different trades, but their powers are limited almost solely to supplying the town with water. Justice of peace courts are held regularly on the first Monday of every month; a sheriff court was first opened at Falkirk in 1834, for the eastern district of the county, comprising the parishes of Falkirk, Polmont, Muiravonside, Slammanan, Larbert, Bothkenmar and Airth; the ordinary court is held on Wednesday, and the small debts court holds its sittings on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month.

The old church, founded by King Malcolm Canmore in 1057, was some years since taken down, and a new one, of the Gothic order, erected on its site; a tower, connected with the ancient structure, has, however, been permitted to retain its long-possessed position. In the church-yard lie the bodies of Sir John Graham (the friend of Wallace) and Sir John Stuart, who were slain on the memorable field of Falkirk, in 1298, whilst fighting for the independence of their country against Edward I; two plain stones mark the spots of their interment. In the same cemetery stands the monument to two brave officers, Sir Robert Munro, of Foulis, and his brother, Dr. Munro, who fell in the second battle of Falkirk, January 17th, 1746. The various sects of burghers, seceders, presbyterians, baptists, &c., have places of worship in Falkirk; the situation of each, with their respective officiating ministers, are given in a subsequent page. A regular market for grain is held on Thursday, to which great quantities are brought; the town has also been long noted for one of the best flesh-markets in the country. Seven fairs are annually held here for cattle and horses, viz., the last Thursday of January, the first Thursday of March, the third Thursday of May, the second Thursday of June, the second Thursday of July, the third Thursday of August, and the first Thursday of November; besides two days for hiring servants (the first Thursday of April and the last Thursday of October), called feeing Thursdays.

which are numerously attended. The three Falkirk trysts, supposed to be the largest cattle markets in the kingdom, are held in the neighbourhood on the second Tuesdays of August, September and October.

CAMELON is a neat village, situate on the road from Stirling to Falkirk, about a mile and a half west from the latter town, on the line of the great canal; it consists of one tolerably well built street; the inhabitants, in number about one thousand, are chiefly employed in the manufacture of nails. Camelon is a place of considerable interest to the antiquarian, having been represented by the early writers as a maritime city—in corroboration of which assertion fragments of anchors, blocks of stone with rings attached, and even an entire boat of ancient model, have been found embedded in the soil. The city, it is alleged, was built by Vespasian, and, when subsequently possessed by the Picts, had twelve brazen gates; not a vestige, however, of this magnificent place remains, except one small upright portion of a wall, visible from the Glasgow road. The present village had its origin about sixty years back, and the sea is now three or four miles distant from it.

LAURISTOUN (or Lauristoun) is a considerable village in the parish of Falkirk, about one mile east from that town; it contains a population equal in number to that of Camelon, a considerable proportion of whom are engaged in the same branch of industry (nail-making) as the inhabitants of that village, while others are employed in weaving and agricultural labours. This place was originally called Langtonu, afterwards Merchiston, and is now named Lauristoun in honour of the late Sir Lawrence Dundas, who made considerable additions to and much improved it.

The parish of BOTHKENNAR lies in the carse of Falkirk, and is washed on the north-east by the river Forth and on the south by the Carron; it is a rich and fertile district, possessing some excellent orchards. A part of the village of CARRONSIORIE lies within the parish, the other part being in the parish of Larbert.

MURAVONSIDE parish is situate on the left bank of the Avon, which river is here rendered of great service in propelling the works of a number of mills on its banks. The district, which is six miles in length by two in breadth, is nearly all arable and inclosed land, and beneath the surface there is abundance of coal. On the Avon are the ruins of an old nunnery, founded by Malcolm IV; and half a mile west are the remains of the ancient Castle of Almond, for several generations a favourite seat of the Earls of Callander.

The parish of POLMONT is one of the richest and most beautiful districts in the country, the entire, with little exception, being arable land, finely inclosed and planted; it has the river Avon on its eastern boundary, and is intersected by the main road from Edinburgh to Falkirk and by the Union canal. The parish, which extends five miles inland from the Forth, has within its limits several coal-works, and abounds in iron and freestone. The village of POLMONT lies on the road to Falkirk, from whence it is three miles and a half to the east. The small village of NETHER POLMONT is situate on the road from Falkirk to Bowness, from which it is four miles distant.

SLAMMANAN parish lies on the south bank of the Avon, extending along the margin of that river for about six miles. On the southern boundary of the district is a small lake, called Black Loch, which is tributary to the great reservoir for the Clyde canal.

FINTRY

As a manufacturing village in the parish of its name, 41 miles from Edinburgh and 15 from Stirling; pleasantly situate north of the Campsie Fells, and admirably calculated for a seat of manufactures from its healthful site and the abundant supply of water; the deficiency of coal, however, is a formidable obstacle to the establishment of works of magnitude, the nearest point from which this indispensable article can be obtained being at the distance of at least twelve miles. The Calclench cotton-mills, which employ a great number of hands, are the most extensive works in operation in this neighbourhood, where there is likewise a considerable distillery. Both the Endrick and the Carron rivers have their source in this district, and in their course through it form several romantic falls, among which the celebrated 'Loup of Fintry,' a cataract of the Endrick descending ninety-one feet, is within the parish, and is particularly worthy of being visited.

 Near the village of Fintry is a hill called 'the Dun,' on which is a superb range of perpendicular basaltic columns, some fifty feet in length; among these may be observed several without any apparent interstices or joints; altogether they form an attractive object for the tourist, and are certainly a grand natural curiosity.

GRANGEMOUTH

Is a very thriving village and sea-port in the parish of Falkirk, three miles from that town, 27 from Edinburgh, and 25 from Glasgow; situate at the junction of the great canal with the Carron river. The origin and formation of this place was commenced in 1777, by the late Sir Lawrence Dundas, for the accommodation of the shipping passing to and from Glasgow, Leith, &c.; it is now a place of considerable importance, and displays the enterprise and perseverance of the British merchant in an eminent degree, by the numerous warehouses, wet and dry stores for timber, &c., that have been erected; the Carron Company likewise have an extensive range of fine warehouses on the banks of the river, and a spacious basin contiguous for the reception of their vessels. Grangemouth enjoys a considerable traffic with Sweden, Norway, and the Baltic in general, also a good coasting trade; ship-building, rope and sail making, and saw-mills, are, among other industrious branches, carried on. A custom-house and post-office are established here, as is a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland. A new road to Bowness has been opened, which it is intended to carry on to Queensferry, whereby a desirable line of communication will be formed between this place and the metropolis of Scotland. On the right bank of the canal, a little to the south-west, stands Kerse (or Carse) House, the seat of Lord Dundas. A new school-house has within these few years been erected—to which, through the very creditable and praiseworthy exertions of the teacher, a library has been attached.

POST OFFICE, Canal-street, Mrs. Gibson, Post Mistress.—Letters from EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, &c. arrive every morning at seven and evening at seven, and are despatched every morning at eight and night at ten.—Letters from STIRLING, DENNY, the North of Scotland, &c. arrive every morning at half-past ten, and are despatched every day at twelve.

KILLEARN AND NEW KILPATRICK,
 WITH THE VILLAGE OF MILNGAVIE.

KILLEARN is a village in the parish of its name, 50 miles w. of Edinburgh, 20 s. w. of Stirling, and nearly 17 n. w. of Glasgow; situate on the river Endrick, almost in the centre of the district, and in a pleasant part of the country. Gentlemen's seats and pleasure-grounds abound throughout the parish; and these, with the surrounding highly picturesque scenery, render the aspect of the locality most impressively agreeable. Considerable interest is also attached to this part of the county, as having been the birth-place or residence of men eminent in the biography of Scotland: in its more secluded recesses Sir William Wallace is known to have occasionally found a retreat; and in a much later age, Napier of Merchiston (inventor of the logarithms), when he was making his calculations, resided for some years at Gartness, a place to the west of Killearn, on the Endrick stream. It has an additional claim to the attention of the literary world from being, indisputably, the birth-place of George Buchanan, the celebrated poet and historian, whose name is deservedly famous all over Europe: he was born at a spot called the 'Moss,' a small farm-house on the bank of the water of Blane, about two miles from the village of Killearn; the farm was the property of the distinguished author's father, and was for a long period possessed by persons of the name of Buchanan. A beautiful monument of white freestone has been erected, by the gentlemen of the parish and neighbourhood, in honour of the memory of their eminently gifted countryman: it is a well-proportioned obelisk, nineteen feet square at the base, and one hundred and three feet in height above the ground; it stands in the village, and the expense of its erection was defrayed by voluntary subscription. Near the obelisk the parochial church, a neat modern structure, has superseded the old place of worship, the ruins of which still remain. The land of the parish is fertile, and is watered by the Endrick and the Blane. The minerals in this district are chiefly limestone and freestone, and beautiful specimens of jasper are occasionally met with among the fragments of basaltic columns which abound here; the woods produce great numbers of indigenous plants. At Gartness, about two miles from Killearn, is a fall of water of about twelve feet, tumbling over a rock, which the salmon going up the river have to clear by a leap; near this is a manufactory for woollen cloths and felting.

The parish of New KILPATRICK is partly in the county of Stirling and partly in that of Dumbarton. The Forth and Clyde canal intersects the district in its northern part, which it enters on crossing the Kelvin by a stupendous aqueduct bridge. In this parish is the thriving village of MILNGAVIE (commonly pronounced, by the population of this and the neighbouring parishes, Milngay), containing calico printing works, a bleach-field, and a cotton spinning mill; the village is seven miles from the city of Glasgow.

KILSYTH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

KILSYTH is a considerable village, and burgh of barony, in the parish of its name; 35 miles w. of Edinburgh, 15 s. of Stirling, between 12 and 13 N. of Glasgow, nearly 12 w. by s. of Falkirk, and seven from Cumbernauld; situate on the main road leading to the three first-named places. It is a straggling and irregularly built place, possessing a population of upwards of two thousand inhabitants, the greater proportion of whom are employed, through the medium of resident agents, in weaving for Glasgow houses. The parish is abundantly stocked with coal and iron ore, vast quantities of the latter being supplied to the Carron iron-works near Falkirk. The district is about seven miles in length and three and a half in breadth, and is watered by the Carron and Kelvin rivers; it also contains one of the reservoirs of the great canal. Kilsyth formerly gave the title of viscount to the unfortunate family of Livingston, attainted in 1715 for their attachment to the house of Stuart; in the burial-place of this family the bodies of the last Lady Kilsyth and her infant son lie embalmed. About the middle of the parish is a hill that exhibits a fine specimen of basaltic columns. Besides the parish church, there is a relief meeting-house and a methodist chapel. Fairs are held on the 2nd of January, the first Tuesday of March, the last Thursday of May, the 16th of August and the 23d of November.

KIPPEN, BUCKLYVIE AND GARGUNNOCK.

KIPPEN is a village rather more than 10 miles west of Stirling, situate in the eastern part of the parish of its name, on the public road. This district at one period derived some distinction from the distillation of whisky, and there are still two establishments in that branch of manufacture; the malting trade is likewise tolerably extensive. The parish, which is eight miles in length by from two to four in breadth, lies partly in the county of Stirling and partly in that of Perth; it is well watered; and from some of the higher grounds an expansive and varied prospect, including Stirling Castle and the romantic woody eminences adjacent, is presented to the eye of the spectator. Some few years since an elegant church was erected in the village; besides which, at BUCKLYVIE, a village in the western division of the parish, five miles from Kippen, there is a place of worship for a congregation of the united associate synod. Fairs are held at Kippen on the first Wednesday of January, the second Wednesday of April, last Wednesday in May, 23d of October, and the first, second and third Wednesdays of December. On Balgair Muir, about midway on the road to Finty, fairs for cattle are held on the last Tuesday in March, the 10th of May, and the Friday before the 26th of June.

The parish of GARGUNNOCK extends six miles in length by two in breadth. As regards its agricultural features and capabilities, it is divided into two districts; one of which, on the south, is hilly and pastoral; and the other belongs to that flat carse land which spreads from the town of Stirling, in a south-westerly direction, towards the county of Dumbarton. The village of Gargunnoch stands on the side of a hill on the south edge of the carse adverted to, on the road to Kippen, about five miles from that village.

LARBERT,

OR Labert, is a small village, three miles from Falkirk and eight from Stirling, beautifully situate on the side of a hill on the northern bank of the Carron. The parish (with which that of Dunipace is incorporated), contains some gentlemen's seats of the first class, among which is Kinnaird, once the residence and property of Bruce, celebrated for his travels in Abyssinia, who was born, who died and was buried in this parish; his remains lie interred in the parish church-yard; a monument of iron, cast at Carron, is erected over his grave. At the reformation an ancestor of this enterprising traveller repaired and preached in the old church. The present place of worship is a handsome modern erection, with a square tower. Near this place the great Roman road or causeway passes, and about a quarter of a mile to the west the foundation of a bridge is visible when the Carron river is low. The famous Falkirk cattle tryst is held on a moor in this parish, in the month of October, when from twenty to thirty thousand head of cattle are exposed for sale.

LENNOXTOWN, AND CLACHAN OF CAMPSIE,

WITH TORRANCE, AND THE PARISHES OF BALDERNOCK AND STRATHBLANE.

LENNOXTOWN, or NEWTOWN OF CAMPSIE, is a large village in the parish of Campsie, 42 miles W. of Edinburgh, 22 s.w. of Sterling, and 9 N.N.W. of Glasgow; situate in the vicinity of some large collieries, and print fields, and extensive bleaching grounds occupied by Mr. Cunningham; the Hurler and Campsie Alum Company also have works in the parish, the entire affording employment to several hundred persons. The 'Clachan' or town of Campsie, as it is designated, is distant about a mile from Lennoxtown, and stands on the low grounds. A new church, with a square tower, has lately been erected in a commanding situation near the centre of the village. The parish of Campsie lies in the central part of the county, and extends eight miles in length by seven in breadth; it is composed of a fertile strath or valley, bounded by ranges of the Campsie hills or fells on the north, which are elevated about fifteen hundred feet above the level of the sea. The celebrated Clachan Glen, with its romantic scenery and waterfalls, in this district, is a place of great resort in the summer; the proprietor courteously grants permission to strangers to perambulate the grounds, and even to pluck the fruits and flowers—while, for the accommodation of visitors, there is a commodious inn at the 'Clachan.' The district is likewise the residence of several persons of distinction, and ornamented by some elegant seats; those of Woodhead and Craigharnet are, perhaps, the most conspicuous. The rivers Kelvin and Glazart pass through the parish, which is also intersected by the two great roads from Kippen to Glasgow and from the latter city to Edinburgh. The small village of TORRANCE (or, as it is generally called, 'the Torrance of Campsie,') is about four miles from Campsie, on the direct road to Glasgow.

The parish of BALDERNOCK (anciently Bathernock) is situate in the southern extremity of the county, where it is bounded by the river Kelvin, and on the southwest lies the Loch of Baldovie. The parish abounds with 'cairns,' and similar memorials of early warfare. The most remarkable of its antiquities is a structure denominated 'the Auld Wife's Lift;' it consists of three stones, two of which are laid on the earth close by the side of each other, and upon the top of these the third is placed, in the same direction, with their ends pointed north and south; the whole are eighteen feet in length, by eleven in breadth and seven in depth. In the surrounding ground the roots and stumps of oak trees have been dug up; and there can be no doubt of this spot having once been a Druidic grove, and place of sacrifice and worship.

STRATHBLANE parish, as its name implies, composes the vale of the river Blane, which pursues a north-westerly course through it; the land of the valley is exceedingly fertile, and it is embellished by several neat villas, while the hills are clothed with natural woods. The village of Strathblane is three miles and a half west of the Clachan of Campsie, and four east of Killearn. There are print-works and a bleach-field in the parish.

ST. NINIANS, BANNOCKBURN & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ST. NINIANS is a considerable village or town in the parish of its name, about one mile and a half from Stirling; situate on the road from that town to Glasgow; it derives its name from the patron saint of the ancient parish church, the steeple of which still remains, and is a distinguished curiosity. The church to which this fabric was formerly attached being used as a powder magazine by the Highlanders in 1746, was accidentally blown up immediately before their retreat to the north; though scarcely a stone of the body of the church was left upon another, the steeple remained uninjured. The town consists of one long and rather narrow street, the houses of which are curious and old-fashioned; upon many are dates of considerable antiquity, and some of them have stones upon which various characters and implements are rudely and grotesquely carved: the dwellings, however, are for the most part whitewashed, which imparts a more lively appearance to the place; and its vicinity presents many gentlemen's seats, well cultivated grounds and thriving plantations. St. Ninians has long been famed for the manufacture of nails, which, with those made in the adjacent villages, are esteemed superior to those produced in England; in other staples are the tanning of leather, and the manufacture of carpets, tartans, and other stuffs. The population of the village, at the present time, exceeds four thousand.

BANNOCKBURN is a prospering manufacturing village in the parish of St. Ninians, one mile from that town, situate on both sides (but chiefly on the east bank) of the Bannock burn (rivulet), which here runs through a glen, and after a course of a few miles drops into the Forth. Few places of its size in Scotland have more rapidly improved of late years, in consequence of the manufactures that have taken their seat here: these consist of tartans and carpets to a considerable extent, the latter fabrics of this place being held in estimation equal to those produced from the looms of Brussels. Coal is obtained in the vicinity in great abundance; and, with several other branches of trade, a tannery has been established in the village for a long period. In this district, the country is characterized by long descending braes, with a northern exposure to the frith of Forth; and it was on one of those uplands, betwixt this village and that of St. Ninians, that was fought, on the 24th July, 1314, the memorable and decisive battle of Bannockburn, the result of which was the permanent security of the independence of Scotland against the ambition of the English monarchy; in this conflict the army of the latter was defeated with a loss of thirty thousand men and seven hundred knights. Bruce's forces were stationed along the front of an eminence called Gillies' Hill, and extended from south-west to north-east, between the farm of Greysteil and the village of St. Ninians: about half a mile south from the latter, upon the summit of a commanding elevation called Caldian Hill, is a large stone, termed the 'Bored Stone,' having a hole in the top in which the Scottish king inserted his standard on the day of the battle. About half a mile above the village of Bannockburn, at Milton, is pointed out the remains of the miller's house to which James III retreated from the battle of Sauchieburn (fought in 1488), about two miles further to the south-west, which occasioned the death of that monarch. Two fairs are held at Bannockburn—on the second Tuesdays of June and October (o.s.).

STIRLING

IS an ancient town, the capital of the county and parish of its name, and a royal and parliamentary burgh; 35 miles W. by N. of Edinburgh, 28 N. by E. of Glasgow, 33 1/2 S.W. of Perth, 11 N.W. of Falkirk, 7 W. of Alloa, and 6 S. of Dunblane. Like the old town of Edinburgh, Stirling is situate on the sloping ridge of a rock, the precipitous end of which, towards the west, is occupied by the castle. The prospects from hence are most delightful, and also extensive; towards the east, especially, they are highly beautified by the windings of the Forth, the ruins of the abbey of Cambuskenneth, the Abbey Craig, and the city of Edinburgh in the distance as far as the eye can reach. While the situation of Stirling is thus one of the most pleasing and picturesque in the country, it is a place noted for its antiquities and the historal associations connected with them: the nature of the present work precludes us from giving a lengthened notice of these subjects, which are very fully detailed in the excellent 'Gazetteer' of the Messrs. Chambers. The origin of the name of Stirling is shrouded in great uncertainty: in all the old records it is entitled Stryveline or Stryveling, a word of obscure etymology, which has been modified into Sterling and Stirling—the latter is now accepted appellation. The town standing, as it does, on the declivity of a hill, the streets are consequently in general clean; the principal one, Broad-street, is of a spacious and imposing appearance, lying along the inclined plane like the High-street of Edinburgh; there are other thoroughfares leading towards the castle, and several diverging streets.

The interior and more ancient streets are not, in their aspect, prepossessing; but great improvements have of late years been effected, both in the town and suburbs, especially since the Reform Council came into office. The approaches to the town, on every side, are truly grand, and probably equalled by few (and exceeded by none) in Scotland. Of late large sums have been expended upon the main streets, and to good purpose; for few towns now are better paved, or lighted with purer gas, than Stirling; it is also well supplied with excellent water, brought to the town from a distance of three miles: the expense of accomplishing these different objects is defrayed by the public, or, as it is termed, 'common good,' without assessing any one; so that Stirling is one of the cheapest towns for residence, as well as one of the most beautiful, in the three kingdoms. The town-house, which stands in Broad-street, has a lofty tower, with a clock and a set of musical chimes; behind which is the gaol; here, likewise, are the court-rooms, and a fine apartment for the court of judicature, which sits twice a year. At the top of King-street is the Athenæum, a handsome edifice with a fine lofty spire, and a good clock, which has four faces: the ground stories are converted into shops; in the upper is a reading-room and a very extensive library, comprising nearly five thousand volumes of ancient and modern literature; the front of the building is circular, thus giving a much greater facility to the entrance of the two streets which branch out here. There is also a school of arts, to which a library of upwards of one thousand volumes is attached; and an embryo museum, with a respectable collection of philosophical apparatus, is connected with this institution. The town supports a second reading-room, called the Commercial, which displays a list of subscribers as numerous as the other; it is situate at the east end of Broad-street.

As was the case with Edinburgh, the town of Stirling arose as a suburb in contiguity with the castle; the latter stands on a basaltic rock, and around it is a pleasant walk, carried from the town, in many places cut out of the solid rock: from this walk are several beautifully interesting views, and it affords an excellent opportunity for examining the basaltic pillars of which the rock is composed. On the south side of the castle is a flat enclosed piece of ground, called 'the Valley,' in which the horse-market is now kept; it is the spot where tournaments were held, and on one side is a place where the ladies used to sit to witness the feats and valour of the combatants, which is still designated 'the ladies' rock.' On the low ground immediately below this rock is a curious artificial mound, of octagonal form, called the 'King's Knot,' which appears to have been a miniature of a regularly fortified place, but which tradition recognizes as the scene of some forgotten play or recreation that the king, with his court, was accustomed to enjoy here. The palace, which is within the castle walls, is a stately structure, externally in the form of a square, and very richly and curiously ornamented with grotesque figures, standing upon pillars or pedestals, in good preservation. For several centuries Stirling castle was little else than a single tower; at the end of the eleventh century it rose into consequence, and in the course of the succeeding century it attained the distinction of being one of the four principal fortresses in the kingdom; such it continued during the sanguinary and protracted contest which Edward I, of England, commenced for the subjugation of Scotland, when it was frequently taken and retaken, after tedious sieges, and under circumstances which prove its great strength and importance at that period. In the course of that eventful struggle between independence and usurpation, Stirling and its vicinity formed the theatre of some of the most brilliant achievements of Sir William Wallace; of these none was so remarkable as the battle of Stirling, fought on the 13th September, 1297, in which the English army was signally defeated with great slaughter. Stirling castle first became a favourite residence of royalty about the reign of James I, whose son, James II, was born in it. In the reign of Queen Anne the fortifications of the castle were considerably extended; and it was declared, in the articles of the treaty of union with England, to be one of the four fortresses in Scotland which were ever after to be kept in repair. Since that period it has experienced little change in external aspect, except its being gradually rendered more and more a modern barrack for the accommodation of soldiers. It is commanded by a governor, deputy governor, fort major, and three subalterns; it has an appointed chaplain, and a barrack-master, who is likewise storekeeper.

Stirling, as a royal burgh, is one of high antiquity, having received its charter from Alexander I. It is governed by a provost, four bailies, and sixteen councillors (twenty-one in all), who are elected according to the terms of the Scottish burgh reform bill, which has also enlarged the limits of the burgh in as far as the elective franchise is concerned; and for that purpose it comprehends St. Ninians, and other small villages and hamlets. The burgh, in connexion with Culross, Queensferry, Inverkeithing and Dunfermline, returns one member to parliament. Being the county town, the courts of the sheriff are held here, and are attended by a number of procurators, resident in the place. The chief manufactures of Stirling are carpets, tartans and shawls, for which it has been long noted, and these branches engage a considerable number of weavers; the other leading avocations are the manufacture of hosiery, rope-making and tanning, and a large woollen mill has lately been erected at the old bridge. There are three banking establishments settled here; they are branches respectively of the National Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and the Bank of Scotland: the agents for these establishments have very handsome premises. On account of the shallowness of the Forth, very little or no shipping trade is carried on; at certain periods of the tide, however, steam-vessels from Newhaven afford a cheap, expeditious and agreeable communication with Edinburgh.

Near to the castle are two churches of the establishment, besides which there are several others belonging to various sects of dissenters: a new seceding church has been erected behind the old one, which was the first seceders' church in Scotland, and was commenced here in 1738, under the auspices of the Rev. Ebenezer Erskine, whose remains were interred within its walls; a Roman catholic chapel has been recently erected. Several charitable institutions are established here, but it is to be lamented that there are none in which disease can find a refuge; a few years since, however, a public dispensary was formed, which is well supported, but it does not contain any accommodation for in-door patients. Stirling has been long celebrated for its schools and hospitals; some of the latter are foundations of long standing, and well endowed—their titles and localities will be found under their appropriate head. Two newspapers are issued from the press of this town every week, namely, the 'Stirling Observer' on Thursday, and the 'Stirling Journal and Advertiser' on Friday; they are papers of considerable repute, and deservedly enjoy a large share of patronage. Stirling, long the seat of the Scottish kings, and the classic site of the most interesting scenes in Scottish history, is now the peaceful centre of the richest and best cultivated district in Scotland. An interesting establishment, appropriate to the latter advantages, has been for some years formed by the Messrs. Drummond, nursery and seedsmen, of this town, wholly at their own expense: this is an agricultural museum, upon an enlightened and extensive scale; and comprises an immense collection of agricultural implements of every possible description, and all the different varieties of grain and roots, with specimens of drains and drain tiles, stacks, &c. &c., in short every article that can be rendered useful in the theory or practice of agriculture: this museum should be visited by every person interested in the improvement of the soil or the ornament of land. Three miles from Stirling are the mineral springs of Airthrie, rapidly and deservedly rising into notice; they are situate in a charming locality, close beside the Bridge of Allan, a neat and thriving village.

A weekly market is held at Stirling every Friday. The fairs are held on the first Friday of February, the last Friday of May, the first Friday of August, the third Friday of September, the third Friday of October (for hiring servants), the first Friday of November, and the second Friday of December. The corn market, which is situate near the Athenæum, is a large and commodious structure; and the flesh market is very capacious.

SUTHERLANDSHIRE.

THIS is a Highland county, and one of the most northerly districts in Scotland. Its form presents five sides, that on the east being bounded by Caithness-shire for about thirty-seven miles; that on the south and south-west by Ross-shire; that on the south and south-east, for a distance of thirty-three miles, by the Moray Frith; and its sides on the west and north are washed by the Atlantic and the North Sea. The area of the shire is computed to comprise 1,840,000 statute acres, deducting about 32,000 for salt-water lochs: of this large territory about 64,000 acres only may be taken as cultivated.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, &c.—This large county consists almost entirely of one uninterrupted succession of wild mountains, valleys, and morasses. The northern and western coasts are bold and rocky, deeply indented by inlets of the sea and bays, and variegated by imposing promontories, among which latter, Cape Wrath, at the north-western corner, is most prominent. The shire comprehends the political districts of Strathnaver (anciently a county of itself), Assint, and Sutherland; the first named including the northern part, and the two latter the southern. The interior is divided, naturally, into three districts—the Eastern, the Middle, and the Western: the first is a level narrow stripe of land on the east coast, sheltered from the north by a ridge of mountains from three hundred to eight hundred feet high; the second is occupied by the four straths of the rivers Helmsdale, Brora, Fleet, and Oickel; and the western district, which borders on the Atlantic, is still more wild and mountainous, abounding in salt and fresh water lochs. The large extent of Sutherlandshire was the last district in Scotland which was subjected to the improvements of modern times. Until about the close of the last century it was a country lying in nearly the same condition as it must have exhibited centuries before, and, in many respects, was shut out from the progress of that civilization which had been so beneficially spread over the rest of Britain. The great barrier which impeded improvement was the dangerous narrow firths to be crossed, and the total destitution of roads, either along the shore or into the interior. Two powerfully moving circumstances at length brought about the introduction of efficient measures of improvement:—the first was the extraordinary and patriotic exertions made by the noble family of Sutherland and Stafford; and the second was the well-judged liberality of parliament, which agreed to advance a moiety of the expense to be incurred for certain roads and bridges in the Highlands. When it was proposed to place turnpike gates on the principal line the noble proprietor said, 'It will shut out the thoroughfare of passengers, of which we have too few; and, regarding the tenantry, I see no benefit in lowering rents with one hand, while, with the other, I impose tolls upon them.' Thus, under the fostering care of the Marquess of Stafford, as well as that of the Marchioness, the aspect of the country has been most agreeably changed. Sufficient praise cannot be given to the lady, who has encouraged the building of neat cottages in the English style, and introduced a taste for cleanliness and propriety of appearance, by premiums in money, and a most becoming patronage in different ways. The breeding of sheep is the great staple business of the shire, for which its sheltered straths and finely swelling green hills, as well as its climate (which is superior to that of Caithness-shire), eminently adapt it. Under the various improvements of store farming the county rears 200,000 Cheviot sheep, of which 20,000 are annually exported, besides 80,000 fleeces of wool. From the fishing stations on the coast the county annually exports from 30,000 to 40,000 barrels of herrings, besides cod, ling, &c. Nor is the business of tillage neglected: the agriculture of the shire is now equal to that of the Lothians; and the soil, being of a sandy open-bottomed nature, bears excellent crops of grain. The exports of farm produce, &c. have been much assisted by the erection of piers at Helmsdale and other places on the coast, chiefly at the cost of the Marquess of Stafford. The building of houses, bridges, and other edifices, has been greatly facilitated by the abundance of sandstone, limestone, and slate found in different parts of the county. The principal rivers are the Durness, the Strathmore, the Navern, the Armsdale, the Avon, the Strath-Fleet, and the Shin. The mountain of greatest altitude in the shire is that of Glaschean, which rises 2,000 feet above the level of the sea.

Sutherlandshire comprises thirteen parishes, and part of one other. It contains only one town, DORNOCH, which is a royal and parliamentary burgh, joining with Kirkwall, Wick, Dingwall, Tain, and Cromarty in returning a member; and the county sends another representative to the senate.

Note.—(a) Reay parish is mostly in Caithness-shire; the entire parish contains 2,881 inhabitants.

DORNOCH, CLASHMORE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DORNOCH is a small town and royal burgh, the capital of the parish of its name and of the county of Sutherland; nine miles from Tain (by the Meikle Ferry, but twenty-nine round by Bonar Bridge), and eleven from Golspie; healthfully and pleasantly situated near the mouth of the river Portnaculter, now generally called the Firth of Dornoch, and opposite to Tain, which lies on the south side of the estuary. Dornoch is an ancient place; it was the residence of the bishops of Caithness even before the twelfth century; the cathedral church was then erected here by Bishop Gilbert Moray, but, in the year 1570, some hostile tribes of the neighbouring country took advantage of the minority of Alexander Earl of Sutherland, made a sudden irruption into the town, and among other barbarities set fire to the venerable edifice, after a desperate resistance by the inhabitants, who succeeded, however, in preserving the old tower that still remains. On the 5th November, 1605 (the day of the discovery of the Gunpowder Plot), a range of handsome stone pillars, which supported some Gothic arches that had escaped destruction, was prostrated by a violent gale of wind. In 1614 the Earl of Sutherland commenced the repair of a part of the cathedral, and subsequent alterations converted it into an ordinary plain church; but during last year (1836) the Dutchess Countess of Sutherland restored the structure to its original dimensions and Gothic proportions; and now, with its projecting abutments and arched windows (all carefully copied from the remaining fragments of the edifice), and adorned with Gothic groinings along the lofty and long roof of the aisles, the Dornoch cathedral is the handsomest erection of its kind in the north of Scotland. The remains of the late Duke of Sutherland repose in the east aisle, in which, it is said, a statue of that deeply lamented nobleman, by Chantilly, is to be placed. A small part of the bishop's palace still remains; but all the manses of the other dignitaries of the cathedral have disappeared, and the town has lost much of its comparative importance since the triumph of the reformation.

Dornoch was constituted a royal burgh by Charles I, in 1628; and is governed by a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer, with eight councillors; in connexion with certain other burghs, before named, it enjoys parliamentary representation. The trade of the town is very limited, owing chiefly to its locality at an angle of the county, and to the free navigation of the firth being obstructed by the same bar of dangerous sand-banks mentioned in the account of Tain. The neighbourhood of Dornoch is extremely pleasant, and within a mile of the place are very superior sea-bathing stations. The town possesses a good grammar school; and there is a school for young girls, endowed by Lady Glenorchy, who was maternal aunt to the Marchioness of Stafford. There are six public fairs or markets held annually in the town, which formerly, on those occasions, was wont to be thronged by persons from distant parts of the country; but now, in consequence of the rise of small villages in different places, and the establishment of cattle markets elsewhere, these fairs are but thinly attended.

CLASHMORE is a modern and thriving village, about three miles west of Dornoch, situate partly on the estate of Sutherland and partly on that of Skibo, being divided only by a small burn which separates these properties, and by the parliamentary road to Caithness, which passes through the village. A neat and commodious inn graces this rising place; it was erected a few years since by the Dutchess Countess of Sutherland, at an expense of about £1,000 sterling, and is much frequented by noblemen, gentlemen and travellers. Within half a mile of the village is the beautiful seat and residence of Mr. Dempster, of Skibo; on the site of this mansion there formerly for centuries stood a castle, with a garrison, under the charge of a general officer as governor; around it many bloody conflicts took place; but its retention having become unnecessary in these peaceful times, it was demolished, and the present castle, of modern architecture, erected in its stead. The celebrated, noble and brave, but ill-fated Marquess of Montrose, in the year 1650, lodged two nights as a prisoner in the castle of Skibo, after his unfortunate defeat by the presbyterian army near Bonar Bridge, and his subsequent capture by the avacious and treacherous Neil Macleod, of Assint, who basely betrayed and delivered him up to his enemies.

HELMSDALE, BRORA AND GOLSPIE.

HELMSDALE, a prosperous modern village in the parish of Loth, is 29 miles s. by w. of Wick, and 64 N. N. E. (by land) of Tain; situate at the mouth of the river from which it takes its name, and on the coast road that passes northward. Within these few years a considerable number of substantial houses have been erected, and an excellent harbour completed; to the latter large fleets of fishing-boats resort during the herring fishery season. The curing of fish is now carried on here most extensively, and some thousands of barrels are exported annually. The small port is further made the point of trade and export (in wool, &c.) for the produce of the interior. At the entrance of the river, which abounds with salmon, and just opposite the town, stand the ruins of an old castle, which serve as a landmark to mariners. There is a respectable distillery in the village, and an excellent commercial inn. The nearest place of worship is about five miles from the village; but, to remedy this inconvenience, her Grace the Dutchess Countess of Sutherland is about to erect one in Helmsdale.

BRORA is a village in the parish of Clyne, about twelve miles from Helmsdale and five from Golspie. Extensive salt-works and coal-mines employ most of the inhabitants, and there is also a small distillery in the neighbourhood. The parish is one of great magnitude, being twenty-four miles in length by from four to eight in breadth—extending inland to Strathbog, through which flows a tributary to the Brora water. A fair is held in the village on the second Wednesday of October.

GOLSPIE is a neat and very respectable village in the parish of its name, eleven miles from Dornoch and twenty from Tain (by the Meikle Ferry), pleasantly situate on the east coast of the county. Before the commencement of the present century, Golspie was principally inhabited by fishermen, but it is now the most important and prosperous village in the shire: the great parliamentary road passes through it, and, besides the north mail daily, double mail gigs, upon a new construction, which will carry several passengers, start from the hotel twice a week for Tongue and Assint. A branch from the Aberdeen Town and County Bank is established here; there is also a most comfortable and agreeably situated inn, justly designated the "Travelle's Home." The parish church, a small but suitable building, erected in 1619, is kept in good repair; it stands within a handsomely enclosed burial-ground, surrounded by thriving trees. A society exists in this village, entitled 'The Friendly Society of the Sutherlandshire Lodge of Gardeners,' for the relief of the sick members and the benefit of their widows. Golspie owes its increasing prosperity to its eligible situation in the centre of the arable district, and to the direct communication established between it and the distant west and north coasts. A convenient pier, accessible at low water, recently constructed in the safe harbour of the Little Ferry, distant only three miles and a half, is a permanent and most valuable improvement to the village and its neighbourhood. The very ancient castle of Dunrobin, the principal seat of the Dutchess Countess of Sutherland, is within one mile of Golspie: it is known to have existed in the twelfth century, and, according to old historians, it was, even long before that period, the family fortalice of the ancient thanes and earls of Sutherland. The architecture of this, the oldest inhabited castle in Scotland, is in accordance with its remote antiquity; and a particularly chaste and characteristic addition to it is at present in progress of erection by the Dutchess—the lineal descendant of the ancient earls, and the successor to the high honours of this illustrious family. The vicinity of Golspie is also distinguished by several other interesting localities—particularly the finely wooded and romantic burn and waterfall, and the picturesque mountain of Ben-Bluaggie, nearly 1,300 feet in height, on the very top of which stands the towering monument, erected within the last year, to the memory of the late Duke of Sutherland, as a grateful memorial of the high respect of no less than two thousand eight hundred persons.

WIGTONSHIRE.

THIS county, which forms the western part of the ancient district of Galloway, occupies the south-western extremity of Scotland: it is bounded on the east by the stewardry of Kirkcudbright (or Eastern Galloway), also by Wigton bay; on the south and west it is girded by the Irish Sea, and on the north by the county of Ayr. The extent of the shire from north to south is about thirty miles, and (including Luce Bay) its breadth from east to west is about thirty miles: the superficial contents of the county (adopting a medium calculation betwixt conflicting authorities) may be taken at 484 square miles, or 309,760 statute acres—of which about one-third, perhaps, is cultivated. The Bay of Luce indents the land to the extent of fifteen miles, and forms two promontories; at the southern extremity of the western projection is the Mull of Galloway, while the apex of the eastern is called Burrow Head; these two peninsular headlands are also known by the Celtic name of the Rhinns (Rhyns or Rinos) of Galloway. On the north another promontory is formed by the intersection of Loch Ryan. At the epoch of the Roman power obtruding itself into North Britain, the ancient British tribe of the Novantes inhabited the whole of eastern and western Galloway, having Leucophibia (the modern Whithorn) for their principal town, and Revigionium (Loch Ryan) for their principal port. The Anglo-Saxons overran the district in the sixth century; and Oswie, the Northumbrian king, settled at Whithorn. During the ninth and tenth centuries the country on the west was inhabited by the Picts from Ireland and the Isle of Man; and hence the name of Galloway, or 'the country of the Gael,' was conferred on the territory. About the twelfth century Galloway passed into the hands of the Scottish king, Alexander II. In the sanguinary contests which originated in the competition of Bruce and Baliol, the chieftains of Galloway long remained attached to the party of the latter, whose family they sheltered after Edward Bruce had subdued the whole country. The family of Douglas subsequently became possessed of the lordship of Galloway; but, on the attainer of the nobleman of that name in 1455, the title became extinct: it was revived, however, and now bestows an earldom on the distinguished family of Stewart and Garlies.

SOIL, CLIMATE, PRODUCE, &c.—This shire is one of the most level districts in Scotland; and the hills, of which there are none of great altitude, are generally pretty free from the encumbrance of rocks. The best lands lie near the shores—the inland divisions being more elevated, and largely mixed with heath and moss. The major part of the soil is of a hazel colour, and is of that kind sometimes called a dry loam, though it often inclines to a gravelly nature. The county presents an exposure to the south, and its waters mostly descend to the Irish Sea. The climate is moist, with winds from the south-west, which prevail during the greater part of the year, usually accompanied with rains; yet, when proper attention is exercised by the agriculturist, the moisture of the climate is but seldom injurious to the products of the earth: snow rarely lies long, and frosts are not generally severe or of tedious duration. In early times this district of Galloway, like most other sections of the country, was covered with woods; and in modern days planting has been pursued most extensively: it is said that, during twenty years, the Earl of Stair annually planted twenty thousand trees. The salutary improvements that have been effected in the agriculture of this county have been, with some justice, ascribed to the efforts of the agricultural society of Dumfries; the spirit and practice of husbandry gradually spread from that shire to Kirkcudbright, and thence penetrated into Wigtonshire: since that period, rents have risen rapidly; and corn and other products of tillage, black cattle, wool, sheep and swine, are now largely exported. The district has long been celebrated for its breed of horses, distinguished by the appellation of 'Galloways'; they are of the Spanish or rather Moorish race, and, when the breed is pure, of a dun colour with a black line along the back: these animals are small, but active, sinewy and spirited. The mineral resources of this county are by no means extensive: there is no coal, at least for any useful purpose; and, although there is plenty of iron ore, the absence of the former article renders the latter of comparatively little value: in the northern part of the 'Rhinos' the existence of sandstone has been ascertained; quarries of slate, of different qualities, are found in various places; and lead mines were formerly wrought within the district.

RIVERS and MOUNTAINS.—This county has no considerable rivers; the principal are the CREE, the BLADENOCH and the TARB, with a few of smaller size. The Cree, which is a boundary river between this county and the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, rises in Carrick, in Ayrshire; after forming a lake at the head of Wigtonshire, it flows again as a stream, and, passing Newton-Stewart on the east, falls into a creek at the head of Wigton Bay. The Bladenoch also has its source in Carrick, and, after running a course of twenty-four miles, falls into Luce Bay. The Tarf issues from a small lake, called Loch Whinnoch, in the parish of Girthon, Kirkcudbright; and, after a course of twenty-one miles, unites with the Dee. The MOUNTAINS, with their elevations above the level of the sea, are, Lang, 1,758 feet; Mochrum Fell, 1,020; Knock of Luce, 1,014; and Barbullion, 814.

Wigtonshire comprehends seventeen parishes, and has three Royal and Parliamentary Burghs, namely, WIGTOWN, STRANRAER and WHITHORN; with these is associated New Galloway in returning a member to parliament, and the COUNTY sends another representative. The burghs of barony in the shire are Newton-Stewart, Garlieston, Glenluce and Portpatrick: it has several thriving villages, and a number of small sea-ports or natural harbours; and is ornamented by many splendid mansions and elegant seats of its nobility and gentry.

GARLIESTON AND SORBY.

GARLIESTON is a sea-port village in the parish of Sorby, finely situate at the head of Garlieston bay (a small haven on the west side of Wigton bay), and opposite Fleet bay. The place is built in the form of a semicircle, facing the sea, with a safe and commodious harbour, capable of receiving a great number of vessels; and if a breakwater was carried out to a rock called the Allen, which could be effected at an expense comparatively trifling with the benefit that would result from the improvement, vessels might here take shelter, when wind-bound, at all times of the tide, which at the spring-flow rises eighteen feet. A regular communication is now maintained between this port and Liverpool, by the 'Countess of Galloway' steamer, once a fortnight. The Broughton and Poutenburn streams, which here flow into the bay, are crossed by several bridges. Galloway House, a splendid mansion, the seat of the Earl of Galloway, erected in 1740, is adjacent on the south; it is surrounded by beautiful plantations and pleasure-grounds, and the walks about it, for several miles, are extremely picturesque, and the prospects on every side delightful.

SORBY (or Sorbie) is a village in the parish of its name, 39 miles E. of Portpatrick, 30 s. E. of Stranraer, 13 s. of Newton Stewart, and 6 s. of Wigtown; situate in a fine part of the county, and surrounded by land in a high state of cultivation. The parish is of an irregular figure, extending along the shore about twelve miles, and varying in breadth from two to six miles inland. The chief bays in the parish are Garlieston (above described) and Rigg, with the ports of Allau, Whaple and Lunerwell: these bays and ports are very convenient for shipping, and well adapted for the prosecution of the fisheries. The headlands are Crugleton and Eagerness: upon these are the remains of two strong castles; and about a mile to the east of the kirk are the gradually mouldering outlines of Sorby tower, formerly belonging to the Hannay family. The places of worship are the parish church at Sorby, and an independent chapel at Garlieston.

GLENLUCE AND NEW LUCE.

GLENLUCE is a thriving village in the parish of Old Luce, 19 miles E. by N. of Portpatrick, 17 w. of Wigton, 16 s. w. of Newton Stewart, and 10 E. by S. of Stranraer; beautifully situate on the banks of the river Luce, and on the public road at the head of Luce bay, which here forms a tolerably good harbour for small vessels. The country around is interesting and picturesque, and abounds with game of almost every kind. The church is a neat edifice, remarkable only for its simplicity; there is but one other place of worship—a chapel for an united secession congregation. About a mile to the north of the church, farther up the vale (from which the village takes its name), are the ruins of Luce Abbey, founded by Rolland, Lord of Galloway, in 1190: it must have been, in its perfect state, an extensive pile of building—its vast mass of prostrate fragments at present cover about an acre and a half of ground, notwithstanding the vast quantities that have been carried away. The only part that now remains entire is a small apartment on the east side of the square, within which latter stood the cloisters; in the middle of this apartment stands a pillar, about fourteen feet high, from which eight arches spring, and have their terminations in the surrounding walls. Tradition reports Michael Scott, of cabalistic memory, to have been at one time abbot of this establishment, and adds that his magical library still exists under a particular part of the ruins. An annual fair is held at Glenluce on the Tuesday before the 26th of May; and there is a monthly fair or market, from the first Friday in April to the first Friday in December.

The village of NEW LUCE is five miles north of Glenluce, pleasantly situate on the Luce, where the Cross water falls into that river. This district, which until the year 1646 formed part of the parish of Old Luce, extends about ten miles in length by from five to six in breadth. It consists partly of high and partly of low ground: of the former, the greater proportion is covered by rocks or heath; the arable land, which is not of great extent, lies principally on the banks of the rivers. In the village stand the parish church and school, the former a plain but commodious edifice.

KIRKMAIDEN, STONEYKIRK AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

THE parish of KIRKMAIDEN occupies nearly the whole of the western limb or peninsula of Wigtonshire—projecting into the mouth of the Solway Frith, and tapering to a point that inclines to the east. This parish, which comprehends the most southerly district of all Scotland, is about ten miles in length and from two to four and a half in breadth; it still has a wild appearance, but produces good crops of corn and potatoes, and feeds numbers of black cattle. The coast is generally bold, and indented by caves scooped out by the endless operations of the sea, and particularly by its furious lashings against this opposing barrier in stormy weather; on both sides of the peninsula, however, there are several good anchoring grounds. At PORTNISOCK is an excellent harbour, constructed at the expense of the late Andrew M'Donnell, Esq., then proprietor, who used every exertion in his power to improve this locality. There is also a tolerable harbour at DROMORE; here the coast-guard have a station, under the command of a lieutenant of the royal navy. The church, a plain edifice, is situate near the centre of the parish, not far from Dromore bay, at the distance of six miles from the Mull of Galloway, 35 from Wigton, 36 from Newton Stewart, 20 from Stranraer, and 16 from Portpatrick. On the estate of Captain M'Donnell, of Logan, is a fish-pond well worthy of the inspection of visitors: it is hewn out of the solid rock, and has communication with the sea by means of an ingeniously contrived iron grating; some of the fish in this artificial reservoir have been rendered so tame that they will feed out of the hand.

The parish of STONEY KIRK (more properly Steven's Kirk) lies in the western peninsula of the county, to the north of Kirkmaiden, six miles from Stranraer and about the like distance from Portpatrick; on the east and south-east is the bay of Glenluce. The parish, which extends seven miles in length by from three to five in breadth, comprehends the three old parishes of Stoney Kirk, Clachshant and Toskertown. The surface is generally hilly, moorish, and of a pastoral character; the low grounds are arable, and in some places planted. On the estate of Captain Maitland, in this district, is an artificial mound, supposed to be of Roman origin, and used as a beacon in the time of war; there is likewise another, of a similar kind, on the estate of John M'Taggart, Esq., of Ardwell House.

NEWTON-STEWART,

AND THE PARISH OF PENNINGHAM, WITH MINNIEGAFF AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NEWTON-STEWART is a thriving town and burgh of barony, 121 miles s.w. of Edinburgh, 82 s. of Glasgow, 52 w. of Dumfries, 26 w. of Stranraer, and 8 n. of Wigton; situate on the high road from Dumfries to Portpatrick, on the right bank of the river Cree, in the parish of Penningham, with a small portion on the opposite side of the stream in the parish of Minniegaff. It owes its origin to a younger branch of the Stewarts, Earls of Galloway, who possessed the estate of Castle Stewart, and founded the village upon it, to which he gave the name of Newton-Stewart. About the year 1778 the estate fell into the hands of William Douglas, Esq., when it was created a burgh of barony under the title of Newton Douglas; but it subsequently resumed its original name. Not much longer than sixty years since, the houses consisted of but one story, and were covered with thatch; but the greater portion are now two stories in height, and slated. The town is principally composed of one long street, in the centre of which is the town-house, forming the chief ornament of the place. The Cree is crossed by a very handsome bridge of five arches, connecting the larger division of the town with the lesser part on the other side of the river. The government of the town is vested in the hands of justices of the peace, who meet once a month. The cotton manufacture was carried on here, and in the neighbourhood, to a considerable extent, but it has been in a declining state for some years: the staple at present is the trade in wool furnished from the surrounding country, and mostly purchased for the Lancashire markets; among the other prominent branches may be mentioned the tanning of leather, for which there are two yards, and an extensive brewery.

The places of worship are a church of the establishment, and chapels for the relief synod, Cameronians, and Roman catholics. The institutions, educational and otherwise, consist of two sabbath schools, the Douglas endowed charity school, a reading and coffee room, a weavers' society, and a masonic lodge. Agricultural improvement has been carried to a great and beneficial extent in this district; and a society entitled the 'Galloway Union Horticultural Society' has been recently formed, which, from the situation of the village, bids fair to prosper. At the upper extremity of that part of the town in Monniegaff parish, there is a large moat hill, where David Graham, brother to Claverhouse, and superior of this district, used, immediately before the revolution, to administer justice. About three miles to the north of the town are the remains of Castle Stewart, formerly belonging (as before stated) to a branch of the Galloway family—now to James Blair, Esq. The weekly market is held on Friday, and cattle markets, which are well attended, on the first Friday in every month; the annual fairs are held on the last Wednesdays of March, July and October, and on the first Wednesday after the 15th of June, all old style.

The parish of PENNINGHAM (or Penninghame) extends along the right bank of the river Cree for about fifteen miles, by a breadth of from three to five; bounded by Wigton on the south and Kirkcown on the west. The greater part of the district is moorish and uncultivated, chiefly adapted to pasture.

MINNIEGAFF is a large parish in the western part of the stewartry of Kirkcubright; bounded on the west by the Cree, over which is a bridge (before noticed), forming the communication with the parish of Penningham and the town of Newton-Stewart. The parish is fourteen miles in length, and eight in breadth. In the lower parts the land is a good deal improved, especially towards the margin of the Cree, which stream being navigable for several miles up, has been of much benefit in an agricultural point of view; this river likewise produces excellent fish of different kinds, but the best and most abundant is the salmon. By far the greater portion of the parish is devoted to pasturage; it is covered by large flocks of sheep and numerous herds of black cattle.

PORTPATRICK

As a sea-port town in the parish of its name, 133 miles s. w. of Edinburgh, 89 s. s. w. of Glasgow, between 34 and 35 w. of Wigtown, the like distance w. by s. of Newton-Stewart, and rather more than 8 s. by w. of Stranraer; it is 117 miles from Dublin, 38 from Belfast, and 21 from Donaghadee. It is situate on the coast of the North Channel, and has long been the great thoroughfare from the north of Ireland, being the nearest point of Great Britain to that country, and the best place for crossing from one kingdom to the other. The town is small, but delightfully situate, with a fine southern exposure, and surrounded on the other side by a ridge of small hills. It was formerly, with the estate of Dunskey, the property of Lord Mount-Alexander, whose residence was the old castle of Dunskey, which stands in the neighbourhood, on the brink of a tremendous precipice overhanging the sea, and was once a building of considerable strength, as appears from its interesting remains; the late Sir James Hunter

Blair subsequently became possessed of the castle, and it is to the exertions of that gentleman that the town and harbour are indebted for many improvements. There is now one of the finest quays in Britain, and a reflecting light house; in the construction of the quay the diving-bell has been most successfully employed. Of late years there have been extensive and important improvements carrying on at the harbour, under the auspices of government and direction of Sir John Rennie, for the accommodation of her Majesty's packets, and to ensure facilities for the embarkation of troops, at all times of the tide, for Ireland; when completed, these works will prove a great national convenience; while the establishment of steam-packets has secured a constant communication between this and the sister country. The commerce of the town and district has kept pace with the improvements as they progressed, and it is now a thriving little place. The principal imports are black cattle and horses from Ireland.

PORT WILLIAM AND MOCHRUM.

PORT WILLIAM is a prospering village in the parish of Mochrum, 24 miles S.E. of Stranraer, 15 S.S.E. of Glenluce, and 8 W. of Whithorn, situate in the bay of Glenluce. It possesses a harbour, which, though small, is commodious and safe; from it large quantities of grain and potatoes are exported for Liverpool and Lancaster. In the vicinity is Montrith, the handsome residence and demesne of Sir William Maxwell, Bart., the founder of the place and its present proprietor; the mansion, which stands on the bank of a fine lake, commands an extensive prospect of the bay of Glenluce, the shores of Galloway, the Isle of Man and the coast of Cumberland: near it is an old castle, surrounded by lofty trees.

The parish of MOCHRUM is about ten miles in length, and extends inland between four and five miles. The Castle or 'Old Place' of Mochrum, surrounded by lakes, is a very ancient picturesque building, in an inland part of the parish; it was formerly the family seat of the Dumbars, Knights of Mochrum, but has for many years been the property of the Earl of Galloway. The village of Mochrum, which is about a mile and a half from Port William, contains nothing worthy of mention except the parish church and school.

STRANRAER,

AND THE PARISHES OF INCH, KIRKCOLM AND LESWALT.

STRANRAER is a thriving, respectable and ancient town, a royal burgh and the seat of a presbytery, as well as a parish within its bounds; rather more than eight miles (by the toll-road) from Portpatrick; eligible situate at the inner extremity of Loch Ryan. The principal street is of great length, but the houses have not been erected on the most regular plan. In the centre of the town stands a building, originally a castle, but now used as the gaol: it is an edifice of considerable antiquity, but the date of its foundation has not been satisfactorily ascertained; it is mentioned, however, in the charter granted by James VI, and is called the 'tower, fortalice, and manor place of Chappel'; and was once the residence of the family of Kennedy of Chapel and Chrychan; in the year 1614 it was inhabited by John Kennedy, of Grennan, and Elizabeth his wife, then Lady Auchtriloor: the lands of Auchtriloor are immediately contiguous to the burgh of Stranraer, and now the property of the Earl of Stair. The town-hall, in George-street, is a neat structure; in it a justice of peace court is held on the first Monday of every month, also a burgh court every Saturday, and the sheriff of the county frequently holds criminal courts with a jury. If the bill now before parliament, for establishing district sheriff small-debt courts, pass into a law, such courts will be held in the burgh six times a year. As a royal burgh, the town is governed by a provost, a dean of guild, and fifteen councillors: it joins with Whithorn, Wigtown and New Galloway in parliamentary representation; the constituency of the burgh is about two hundred and twenty. Stranraer possesses a custom-house, of which all the creeks within the 'Rhinnis' are members; and there are likewise two coast-guard establishments, under the inspection and command of a captain of the royal navy.

The bay and harbour of Stranraer afford excellent anchorage; and the pier, which is of considerable length, and has been constructed within the last eleven years, has proved a great convenience to the shipping. Cairn Ryan also presents safe anchorage; and vessels from the West Indies, bound for the Clyde, frequently take shelter in this haven; the depth of water is such as to allow a fleet of men of war to ride at anchor here with perfect safety. The bay affords a plentiful supply of fine oysters, the right of fishing for which belongs exclusively (by ancient charter) to Sir Alexander Wallace, of Loch Ryan, who annually lets it. There are likewise several kinds of white fish caught abundantly; and occasionally some herrings are got, equal in quality to the finest obtained on any other part of the Scotch coast. The exports of the place consist of shoes and leather—also grain, cheese and all kinds of farm produce, and cattle, which are now conveyed to Glasgow regularly twice every week by steam-vessels, to Belfast once a week, and to Liverpool occasionally. Among other branches of business usually found in a flourishing town, there are in Stranraer three tannards, two or three extensive nurseries in the neighbourhood, and some nail manufactories. There are four principal inns, and two banking houses; these latter are branches respectively of the Paisley Banking Company and the British Linen Company.

The edifices for public worship are a church of the establishment, three dissenting meeting-houses, and a Roman catholic chapel. The inhabitants support two news-rooms, a subscription and two circulating libraries, a savings' bank, and a dispensary. There are a debating and two friendly societies, a masonic lodge, and various clubs. Another society, which is advancing in importance, is the 'Stranraer and Rhinnis of Gallo-way Agricultural Society;' it has its exhibitions and meetings twice annually. There are several seats in the neighbourhood adorned with all the charms of nature and art: Culhorn, now the residence of the Earl of Stair, is one mile and a half distant; Castle Kennedy, four miles off, the property of the same nobleman, is surrounded by delightfully picturesque scenery. The following, situate in the vicinity of the burgh, are also worthy of notice:—Lochnaw Castle, the residence of Sir Andrew Agnew, Bart.; Corsewell House, J. Carrick Moore, Esq.; Loch Ryan House, Gen. Sir Alexndr. Wallace; Dunskey, Colonel Thomas Blair; Balgriggan House, Captain P. Maitland; Ardwell House, John M'Taggart, Esq.; Logan, Capt. M'Dowall; Dunraggit, Sir Jas. Dalrymple Hay, Bart.; Gerroch, — Cathcart, Esq.; Balkail House, J. Adair, Esq.; Park House, Col. P. V. Agnew; and North-west Castle, Sir Jno. Ross, R.N.

The market is held on Friday. The following are the annual fairs: Tuesday before the first Wednesday of January, for horses; third Friday of April, for cattle; first Friday of May, cloth—and third Friday, cattle; Thursday before Midsummer, for horses—and Friday, for cattle; and the third Fridays of July, August, September (and horse fair), October and November, are cattle markets.

The parish of INCH lies on the shore of Loch Ryan, extending nine miles in length by a breadth nearly as great. The parish church stands on the margin of a lake, in which there is a small beautifully wooded island. The lake is nearly divided by a neck of land, on which stand the ruins of a castle, formerly a seat of the Earls of Stair.

KIRKCOLM parish is bounded by Loch Ryan on the east, measuring a square of about five miles. The church is pleasantly situate near the shore of the lake, north of the bay called the Wig.

The parish of LESWALT lies betwixt the Irish channel on the west and Loch Ryan on the east; it is about the same size, and of much the same form, as Kirkcolm. The surface of this district is most agreeably varied with hill and dale; while from the sea the coast presents bold and rocky features.

WHITHORN,

WITH THE ISLE OF WHITHORN, AND THE PARISH OF GLASSERTON.

WHITHORN (or Whithern) is a town of considerable antiquity and a royal burgh, in the parish of its name; 40 miles E. by S. of Portpatrick, 32 S.E. of Stranraer, nearly 20 S. of Newton-Stewart, and 10 S. of Wigton; situate not far distant from the shore of Wigton bay. It was originally inhabited by a tribe of Britons called the Novantes, and was then a town of some consequence: it is mentioned by Ptolemy under the name of Leucophibia; the Saxons called it Hwitorn, and from the latter the appellation Whithern is derived. St. Ninian built a church here in the fourth century, which Bede mentions as the first that was erected of stone. During the eighth century it was the seat of the bishops of Candida Casa, and it formed the episcopal capital of a bishopric of Galloway in the twelfth century. After the period of the reformation, however, it is seldom mentioned in public transactions, and seems to have sunk into obscurity. The trade of the place, at the present day, is inconsiderable; and, with the exception of tanning, it possesses no branch that can be classed under the head of manufactures. The town consists chiefly of one street, running from north to south, with diverging alleys; nearly in the centre it is intersected by a small stream, across which a bridge has been thrown for the public accommodation.

From successive kings Whithorn received various charters constituting it a burgh of barony; it is now a royal burgh, but the period when it attained that distinction does not appear. It is governed by a provost, two bailies, and fifteen councillors; and joins with Stranraer, and other burghs herein before mentioned, in returning a member to parliament. The places of worship are the parish church, and meeting-houses for

WIGTOWN,

AND THE PARISH OF KIRKINNER AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

WIGTOWN (or WIGTON—the former mode of spelling, however, being now generally adopted, to distinguish this town from that of Wigton, in the county of Cumberland,) is a royal and parliamentary burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of the parish of its name; 105 miles s. w. of Edinburgh, 58 s. w. of Dumfries, 28 E. by s. of Stranraer, and 8 s. of Newton-Stewart; pleasantly situate on an eminence near the north side of the Bladenoch water, two miles from its junction with the Cree, or bay of Wigtown. It is a place of considerable antiquity, having come into existence, during the middle ages, from the erection of a castle on the spot by a band of successful Saxon invaders, who conferred on it the name of Wig, from the place having been contested in battle; the adjunct ton, or 'town,' was afterwards given when the town arose. The castle of Wigtown subsequently became a royal residence; but the town itself does not appear to have been conspicuous until the reign of David II, when it gave the title of earl to the family of Fleming. The principal street of the present town is a parallelogram, of which the internal space is laid out in shrubberies and inclosed by a rail, forming an agreeable promenade for the inhabitants. At the end of this is a very handsome modern cross, of granite, sculptured in an elegant and tasteful manner; at the other extremity is the town-house, having a tower of considerable height, which imparts a degree of dignity to the town. The building contains the court-room, an assembly-room, and a subscription library; the parish school is also accommodated beneath the same roof: the sheriff holds a debt court in it once a fortnight, for causes not exceeding £8. 6s. 8d.; and ordinary courts are held every Tuesday in time of session. Many new buildings have lately been erected, some of them of a very tasteful and costly description; and the burgh may, upon the whole, be considered in an improving condition. The inns and accommodations for strangers visiting the town are excellent; of the former there are two principal, one of which, the 'Commercial,' is an efficient posting-house. The harbour of Wigtown is safe, and has depth of water for vessels of three hundred tons butthen to approach the town. The principal exports from hence are corn and cattle; and there is a regular communication with Liverpool by steam-packets. An extensive brewery and a distillery

(the latter at Bladenoch), with a private bank and a branch of the British Linen Company's bank, are the other leading pursuits in business. Wigtown is the seat of a custom-house, the members of which comprehend the creeks of Wigtownshire and those of the stewartry of Kirkcubright, from the Mull of Galloway to the mouth of the river Fleet. In the year 1581 Wigtown was specified as one of the king's free burghs; it is (as a royal burgh) governed by a provost, two bailies, and fifteen councillors, and is associated with Stranraer, Whithorn and New Galloway in returning one member to the legislature; the constituency of the burgh is at present under one hundred.

The places of worship are a church of the establishment, and a meeting-house for seceders. A masonic lodge and a friendly society are in the town; the latter, which was established in 1795, possesses a capital of £600. There is a superior boarding establishment for young gentlemen, which is very ably conducted by the master of the grammar school. The parish of Wigtown extends five miles in length by four in breadth: it has several eminences throughout, but is in general flat and fertile. At the western extremity of the parish are nineteen large granite stones, placed in a circular form: they are supposed to have belonged to a druidic place of worship or sacrifice, while tradition points to the spot as the tomb of King Galdus. The market, which is, by charter, to be holden on Saturday, is now but little observed. Fairs are also entitled to be held at Candlemas, on the first Monday in April, and the first Fridays in July and August, all old style;—these are, however, in a great measure, discontinued.

The kirk town of KIRKINNER is about three miles from Wigtown, on the road to Garlies, and is remarkable for its beautiful and picturesque scenery. The principal ornament in this neighbourhood is the stately mansion of Col. P. V. Agnew. Here are also the remains of the ancient castle of Baldoun, formerly a residence of the Dunbars, an incident in which family is supposed to have served as the foundation of the 'Bride of Lammermoir,' by the late Sir. W. Scott. The parish extends three miles along Wigtown bay, the Bladenoch water dividing it, on the north, from Wigtown, and Dowallon lake touching it on the south. The ruins of Loncaster church (the parish now incorporated with Kirkinner,) stand a mile from the lake.

(C) The proprietors claim the attention of the public to the mode necessary to be observed in directing to this town—which should be 'Wigtown, North Britain,' or 'Wigtown, Wigtownshire,' not Wigton (only), as, in the latter case letters, &c. will be forwarded to Wigton, in Cumberland, instead of to their proper place of destination.)

THE ISLE OF MAN.

THIS Island, now forming part of the British European dominions, is situate in the Irish Sea, at nearly an equal distance from the English and Irish coasts. It inclines from a north-easterly to a south-westerly direction; lies between  $54^{\circ} 3'$  and  $54^{\circ} 24'$  of north latitude, and  $4^{\circ} 16'$  and  $4^{\circ} 48'$  west longitude from Greenwich: at each extremity it diminishes almost into a point. The distance from Douglas Head to the Liverpool north-west buoy is 60 miles—to St. Bee's light, 42; from the Point of Ayre to Whitehaven, 28—to the Mull of Gal'oway, 21—to the Copeland Islands, off Belfast, 38—to Stranefore Lough, 40; from the Calf of Man to Dublin, 60—to Holyhead, 45—and to Liverpool north-west buoy, 68. The island is about thirty miles in length, and nearly twelve in breadth at its widest part; the superficial contents are calculated at 130,000 acres, about two-thirds of which are under cultivation—the rest consists of irremediable mountain or unprofitable moor. Respecting the derivation of the name, etymologists are not unanimous: some suppose it to be a contraction of its original and native designation, Manen (or Menang), from the rocky organization of the land; others deduce it from Mona, by which appellation, probably, it was known to Ptolemy; while a third class contend that it is derived from the British word mon, signifying 'detached,' or 'insulated': by Pliny it is called Mona-pia, and by Bede Manavia Secunda.

EARLY HISTORY.—The ancient history of Man, like the derivation of its name, is involved in much obscurity, and rests on vague and uncertain traditionary accounts. According to one author, this island was held by Biule, a Scot, about the beginning (according to another, about the end) of the fourth century; in the early part of the fifth it is assigned to Mananan Mac Leir, a magician, whom St. Patrick compelled or persuaded to relinquish the island, and appointed St. Germanus, about the year 440, to be bishop and ruler in his stead, who established the Christian religion among the natives. Subsequently St. Maughold, a penitent captain of robbers, having arrived from Ireland in a little wicker boat covered with skins, was unanimously chosen for king by the Manx nation. About 580, Brennus, nephew of Aylon, King of Scotland, possessed the throne; fourteen years afterwards he obtained a victory for his uncle at the expense of his life; and Man being annexed to Scotland, the three grandsons of Aylon (Ferguard, Fiacre and Donald,) were sent hither to be educated under Conan, bishop of the island; Donald subsequently governed with justice and prudence. In 614, Man is said to have been subdued by Edwin, King of Northumberland; and from this period the British historians are silent, for nearly three hundred years, respecting this island; but Manx traditions record that during that interval a race of twelve kings reigned here, called Orries, descendants of an enterprising prince, son of the King of Denmark and Norway, who, having subjugated the Orcaades and the Hebrides, took possession of this island, where he resided, and for many years enjoyed a tranquil reign: the erection of Castle Rushen is ascribed to Gutfred, son and successor of Orries. Macon is said to have reigned immediately after Gutfred: having lost his crown for refusing to do homage to Edgar, the English monarch, he was reinstated, and made admiral of that incredibly large fleet (of four thousand eight hundred sail), with which, twice a year, he sailed round the British islands, to protect them from the incursions of the Danes and Normans. Next in succession were, probably, Syach and Goddard. The establishment of Godred Crovan is mentioned in the 'Manx Chronicle,' the first authentic history of the island, compiled by the monks of Castle Rushen: Godred Crovan, son of Harold, King of Iceland, served under Halfagar, who had stimulated Tosti, the offended brother of Harold, King of England, to rise in rebellion against the English sovereign: they made a descent with little molestation, but were afterwards (on the 25th September, 1066,) totally defeated by Harold; Godred with difficulty escaped to the Isle of Man. In two attacks he was defeated by the Manxmen, but in the third he was victorious, and settled with a few of his retainers on the island, after he had granted peace to the inhabitants, on condition that they should consider him as lord, and themselves as tenants of the soil. After this, Godred reduced Dublin, with a great part of Leinster, and his navy overawed that of Scotland. Lagman, his son, having reigned seven years, resigned his sceptre to his brother Olave, then a minor, in 1089, and died while on a pilgrimage at Jerusalem. Though there was a regular succession of kings from this time, there is little of historical interest recorded—Man continued to be the petty theatre of treachery, usurpation, and atrocity. In 1210, John, King of England, sent over an earl, named Fulgo, who, in the absence of its monarch, ravaged the country, plundered the people, and returned. In 1228, Reginald, brother to Olave, the reigning sovereign, prevailed on Allan, and Thomas Earl of Athol, to make a descent on the island; they wasted all its southern part, pillaged the churches, and having put to death so many of the inhabitants as to render the whole country a scene of desolation, they returned to Galloway; Reginald was afterwards slain in an engagement with his brother, near Tynwald Hill. In 1234, Henry III, of England, granted Olave an annuity, in silver coin and wine, for defending the sea-coast. In 1247, Harold paid a visit to Henry III, and was knighted by him; Magnus was also knighted by the same monarch. Waldebeof preferred an ineffectual claim, against Alexander of Scotland, to the kingdom of Man; but William de Montacute, with a body of English troops, expelled the Scots; and having contracted considerable debts to defray the expenses of the war, he mortgaged the revenues of the island to Anthony Bec, Bishop of Durham and Patriarch of Jerusalem, to whom King Edward afterwards gave it for life. In 1307, Edward II bestowed this island on his favourite, Piers Gaveston, and, at his death, on Henry Beaufort, 'with all the demesnes and royal jurisdiction.' The Scots, under Robert Bruce, afterwards recovered it; William de Montacute, Earl of Shrewsbury, wrested it from the Scots, however, and sold it to William Scroop; this nobleman being executed for high treason, the Isle of Man reverted to the crown, and was granted by Henry IV to Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland; Percy was attainted in 1403—the island was permanently forfeited, and was given, with the patronage of the bishopric and all other ecclesiastical benefices, to William Stanley (subsequently Earl of Derby) and his heirs for ever, on condition of presenting the king with a pair of falcons at his coronation. From this time the islanders have been free from the ravages of contending parties—from the fear of hostile invasion; and have enjoyed a tranquillity to which their predecessors had been strangers for many centuries. The royalties and revenues descended uninterruptedly from ancestor to heir till the time of William the sixth Earl of Derby, who, to silence the objections against his title (which had been previously removed), obtained from James I a new grant of the Isle of Man; and this grant was confirmed by act of parliament. The proposal of the parliamentary general, Ireton, to restore to James Earl of Derby his English estates, if he would surrender the Isle of Man, was sternly and indignantly rejected: this nobleman being afterwards taken prisoner at Chester, and executed at Bolton on the 15th October, 1651, his loyal and patriotic Countess undertook the defence of the island, and determined to maintain herself in Castle Rushen to the last extremity; but Christian, who commanded the Manx forces, betrayed her cause to Colonels Birch and Duckenfield. The Isle of Man was granted to Lord Fairfax; but, on the restoration of Charles II, it was restored to the Derby family, with which it remained till 1735, when (James Earl of Derby dying without issue,) the inheritance devolved on James second Duke of Athol, who was descended from Lady Amelia Sophia, youngest daughter of the seventh Earl of Derby. John, the last of this family who enjoyed the regalities of Man, inherited by descent the dukedom of Athol, and obtained, by his marriage with the daughter of the late duke, the lordship of Man. In 1765, the fifth year of the reign of George III, the sovereignty was vested in the King of England: the treaty by which this conveyance was made specifies that the Duke and Dutchess shall receive £70,000., to be laid out in estates of Scotland, to be entailed for ever on their heirs, in purchase of their royalty, the revenues arising or to be raised from the custom duties, and some other perquisites—themselves retaining the manorial rights, with many other advantages and emoluments. The Duke and Dutchess, not thinking themselves sufficiently indemnified, petitioned parliament on the subject, and received a further grant of £2,000. during their own lives. In 1781 their son John presented a petition to parliament, praying, among other things, that he and his heirs might be enabled to obtain, exercise and enjoy certain powers and remedies. In 1805 it was determined, after much debate and opposition, that, instead of receiving one-fourth (£3,000.) of the revenues of Man, he should annually receive a sum equal to one-fourth out of the consolidated fund. The motive of government for entering into this compact was to suppress the smuggling trade, which had increased to so alarming an extent as to threaten serious evils to the British revenue; the inhabitants, at first, were much alarmed at this change in their affairs, but experience has long since taught the reflecting and industrious part of them to consider it as an advantage to their community. In 1829 the whole interest possessed by the Duke of Athol was purchased by government for £416,000.: thus the Isle of Man, with all its privileges and immunities, became finally and effectually incorporated with the United Kingdom.

The Maux are a long-lived healthy people, differing little in personal appearance from those of the surrounding countries: they were long considered more superstitious and less industrious than their neighbours; but at present there is not much inequality as respects the first, and the second is seldom found deficient where a proper reward presents itself as a stimulus. They are civil to strangers, and enter freely into conversation with them; they are inquisitive, and, if their inquiries are not satisfactorily answered, suspicious. The spirit of litigation is, perhaps, less prevalent than formerly, and crime is not so frequent as in England; but imprisonment for small debts is common. On the whole they may be considered quiet and unobtrusive; they trouble their heads little about European politics, but are extremely watchful of their insular rights. In consequence of the men being much engaged in fishing during harvest, much of the field-labour is performed by females, but perhaps not in a greater proportion than in the west of Scotland. The humbler class subsist mostly on fish and potatoes; but, though neither so well fed or clothed as the English peasantry, they are better in both respects than those of Ireland. There is no tax levied in the form of poor-rates; but from the donations at each place of worship every sabbath, and from various other sources, considerable provision is made for the unfortunate and the indigent. The native language of the inhabitants is a dialect of the Celtic, though, in the towns, all speak good English, and there are very few in the interior who do not understand it. The island is no longer that refugium peccatorum, that asylum of fraudulent debtors, which it formerly was; and it is now visited by a more honourable class. Though house-rent and provisions, in general, are not much cheaper than on the adjacent shores, what are usually termed the luxuries of life may be obtained at half the price; sea-fish, in particular, is abundant, excellent and cheap. Tax-gatherers may be said to be unknown; and the laws, though in some respects singular, are mildly and justly administered. The facilities of education, more especially in Douglas, are great. Hence it is a desirable residence for families of small incomes, who may, without the trouble and expense of a long journey or tedious sea-voyage, almost any day visit their native shores in a few hours, by means of the steam-vessels. As a bathing-place, the pellucid clearness of its waves renders it nearly unrivalled; and no accommodation is wanting that ingenuity can suggest, or capital provide.

SURFACE, SOIL, CLIMATE, PRODUCE, &c.—From the northern extremity of the mountains to the Point of Ayre the land is level, consisting in general of a light soil, with a substratum of marl, which mostly lies at the depth of two or three feet; it is advantageously used as a manure, and gives consistence to the superincumbent soil. It requires to be renewed every eight or nine years; and, if a proper rotation of crops be observed, the produce of the ground abundantly rewards the labour of the husbandman. In many parts of the flat district, in the neighbourhood of Ramsey, peat is found in considerable quantities, in beds of six or eight feet thick, and sometimes much more. Here, as in the turf mosses on the opposite coast of Lancashire, and other places, are frequently dug up trunks of pine and oak, both undecayed, the latter black and hard: this is a strong presumptive proof that Man formerly possessed forests, though now comparatively destitute of timber, except modern plantations. The southern part of the island, from Ballasalla to beyond Castletown, is again a champagne light district, in which is found limestone of an excellent quality both for building and agricultural purposes; and lime-burning is spiritedly carried on by several individuals. Between Douglas on the east and Peel on the west coast, is a valley, in some parts contracted, in others more expanded, which divides the island into two rather unequal portions, the northern being the more considerable. The other parts of the island, not already noticed, are an intermixture of hill and dale, frequently ending in abrupt precipices over the sea. Stone for building is generally abundant, but of a slaty texture, which prevents its being hewn; the houses are, in consequence, mostly plastered either with lime or stucco. A tough clay slate is obtained at Spanish Head, in blocks, in many instances twelve feet long, which is used for gate-posts, small bridges, and other similar structures, as well as being split up for roofing houses. Extensive lead-mines are wrought at Laxey, Foxdale, and several other parts of the island. The newly opened iron ore mines, at Kirk-Maughold, promise very well; and a company is formed, and about to commence operations, for the discovery of coal, or proving its non-existence in the Isle. South Barule yields an inferior kind of slate, as well as granite, which also appears on the surface at Foxdale, at Dhoon, near Laxey, and in various districts of Santoun parish. Some of the black limestone is sufficiently fine to be worked as marble; the quarries of Pool-Vash furnished the steps to St. Paul's, London, which were presented by Bishop Wilson, the spiritual and the temporal benefactor of Man. The CLIMATE of the island is rather milder than that of the surrounding countries: the rigours of winter, and the oppressive heats of summer, are almost unknown, and few days occur on which some hours may not be pleasantly passed in the open air. Gales of wind and falls of rain are frequently of long duration, but their effects appear to be modified by the saline impregnations they receive from the sea. Upon the whole, the climate is salubrious, and has been found favourable to delicate constitutions. The zoology of Man differs but little from that of England, except in the absence of all venomous reptiles; but the sheep, beeves and horses, as in other mountainous counties, are much smaller, and more hardy. The birds most observable on the coasts are the gull, the gannet, and the Royston crow, to which may be added the cormorant, the heron and the curlew; the puffin, which formerly passed the breeding season on the Caif, has entirely deserted it; field grouse have disappeared, but the sportsman may meet with hares, partridges, woodcocks, and abundance of snipes, and wild ducks and geese. Neither is there anything remarkable to be observed of its botanical productions, except the frequency of the furze, which is found on almost every fence, and in many inclosures; it continues in bloom a great part of the winter, and is frequently given for fodder to cattle, &c., after being well bruised; its deep yellow flower chequers the landscape here, in spring, as much as the white blooming hawthorn beautifies the enclosures in England.

MOUNTAINS, RIVERS, &c.—The greater part of the sea boundary, particularly to the west, south and south-east, is formed by precipitous rocky cliffs, indented with numerous bays and creeks. A chain of moderately elevated mountains pervades about one half the island; these commence at Moughold Head, near Ramsey—are interrupted between Mount Greeba and South Barule—and then continue to the south-western extremity of the island, where they abruptly terminate in the sea at Breda Head. The greatest elevation in this ridge is Snafield, whose summit is 2,000 feet above the level of the sea; from this eminence can be distinctly seen, on a clear day, England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales. North and South Barule are not much inferior in altitude to Snafield; the other principal eminences, to which names have been assigned, are Pen-y-Poant, Karragh, Mount Pelier, Garrahan, Sartet, Greeba and Slian-Aalyn. The uninclosed tracts of the whole ridge belong to the crown; but the natives have the privilege of turning their diminutive mountain sheep upon them to graze, and of cutting turf, inferior, indeed, in quality, but of the first necessity to the poor, in a place where all other kinds of fuel must be imported from Britain. These mountains give rise to numerous mill-streams and rivolets, naturally short and rapid in their course, and remarkable from the clearness of their waters. The principal of these is Ramsey or Sulby river, which, descending from Snafield and the neighbouring heights into the fertile plains of the north, after an easterly course of about nine miles, forms the harbour of Ramsey. Douglas river, as its name imports, is an union of the Dhoo and the Glass, or the 'Black' and the 'Grey,' which coalesce a little more than a mile westward of Douglas, give name to the town, and form its port. The northern side of South Barule supplies Peel river, as it likewise does the mountain torrent that presents the waterfall of Glenmay, or Glenmoji, three miles to the southward of Peel. Another stream descends from the opposite side, forms a junction with a branch near the village of Ballasalla, and, taking a southerly course, empties itself into the sea at Castletown bay. Four other rivers take an easterly course; one discharges its waters into the sea at Laxey, and the other three cross the upper and lower road from Douglas to Castletown. Besides these there are several more; but they are all shallow, and some, in summer, are not large enough to turn a mill. The greater part contain trout in sufficient quantity to afford diversion to the angler; but salmon, which were formerly abundant, have almost disappeared. Pearl muscles are found in the Dhoo. The island, it is affirmed, contains several medicinal springs, but the component parts of the waters, or their salutary properties, have not been fully ascertained.

Agriculture is much improved of late years, and is at present little inferior here to what it is in England. The prevailing order of crops is, first, potatoes or turnips; second, barley; third, clover; fourth, oats, or, if good land, wheat; and fifth, peas, if wheat has preceded: after two or three of these rotations of crops, a poor soil is laid down with grass, and afterwards undergoes the same process. Flax is grown extensively, and many horses, cattle, &c., are reared for exportation. To the culture of the potato the inhabitants are particularly attentive; and in the neighbourhood of the eastern and southern coasts, where sea-weed, commonly termed 'wreck,' may sometimes be had in very considerable quantities, they raise plentiful crops of barley. The gross rental of the island, in 1824, was estimated at about £70,000.; the price of agricultural produce is generally regulated by the Liverpool markets; taking the tithes in kind (a customary measure) is greatly and universally disliked. Leases are restricted by law to twenty-one years; the usual time of entering on a farm is the 12th November, and the rent is paid half-yearly; the rents vary from five shillings to three pounds per statute acre (the measure universally in use), according to the quality of the land and the favourableness of its situation. The uninclosed land, including the uncultivated inclosed land, called 'garey,' produces heath and abundance of gorse. The common fences are generally very irregular, composed of sods and loose earth, reaching to the height of four or five feet, and mostly topped with gorse; quickest hedges are not to be frequently seen, though the road from Ballasalla to Castletown exhibits one of the finest imaginable. The island is now pretty well intersected with tolerably good roads, which are kept in as perfect repair as those in most parts of England; not by turn-pike gates—such an impediment to travelling is not known in Man—but by a tax upon all retailers of ale and spirituous liquors, and on lands, houses, &c. Next to agriculture, the HERRING FISHERY, for which the Isle has long been famed, constitutes its principal wealth. The number of boats employed is about three hundred, each of which is near twenty tons burden, and navigated by six or eight men. The fishermen are not allowed to commence their avocation before the 21st of June, nor to have their nets in the water during sunrise; in other matters they have peculiar regulations among themselves; an admiral commands the fleet, and all litigations arising out of the fishery are decided by a proper court. The quantity caught and cured in 1836 was about 31,000 barrels; of these, 21,000 were exported. With the exception of those bought up by fast-sailing vessels for immediate use, the herrings are cured in the island: those intended for red herrings are first salted a few days, then hung up in the curing houses, exposed to the smoke of wood, and packed in barrels; the white herrings are salted, packed up in barrels with pickle, and are then fit for exportation; a barrel of each contains from five hundred to seven hundred fish. Trout and eels, with very rarely a small salmon, are the natives of the rivers; but the ocean makes up amply for the deficiency of fresh-water fish.

COMMERCE, TRADE, MANUFACTURES, &c.—Before the year 1765, when the customs of the ports became vested in the British government, the commerce of Man was chiefly of an illicit kind, being made a complete store for smugglers; subsequently to that period, this contraband trade in some measure declined; but it is within the last thirty-two years that it has been effectually suppressed, and a legitimate traffic beneficially pursued by the inhabitants. Besides the produce of the fishery, before mentioned, the exports consist of corn, cattle, horses, iron and lead ore, linen cloth, poultry, eggs, butter, &c. The importation of foreign and colonial produce is at present restricted by law to the port of Douglas; but it is not improbable that a material alteration in these restrictions, and other matters connected with the imports and duties of the island, may be effected in a future session of parliament. The following are the articles, and the quantities of each, allowed to be imported, with the duties thereon:—

The exportation of any of the above articles is strictly prohibited; and the penalty for disilling is £200. with the forfeiture of all the implements employed. Coals are imported free; hemp is charged with a duty of 4d. per lb.; hops, 1½d.; iron and timber from foreign ports, 10 per cent. All goods, wares, merchandize, &c., imported from abroad, and not enumerated above, are charged with an importation duty of 15 per cent., and if from the united kingdom with a duty of 2½ per cent., but if entitled to any drawback on exportation the duty is 5 per cent. The chief imports, exclusive of those already mentioned, are of British produce or manufacture; and the duty of 2½ per cent. imposed upon them is much complained of. The MANUFACTURES of the island principally consist of woollen and linen cloths, hats, paper, leather, soap, cast iron, &c. &c.

GOVERNMENT, CIVIL AND ECCLESIASTICAL.—The government of Man is vested in a governor and captain-general under the crown, or, during his absence, in a lieutenant-governor, assisted occasionally by his council and the two de-mesters or judges of the island. The council consists of seven persons, who hold their seats by virtue of their offices, viz., the lord bishop, the receiver-general, the water-bailiff, the attorney-general, the clerk of the rolls, the archdeacon and the clerk of the council. In affairs of internal polity and legislation, the house of keys, consisting of twenty-four land proprietors, whether natives or strangers, are convened as the representatives of the people, though not elected by them. These two branches, viz., the governor in council and the keys, constitute the legislature; and the laws they enact, having received the approbation of the king (and having been promulgated on Tynwald Hill, according to ancient usage), become statutes of the land. The governor presides in the court of chancery, which, besides its other business, hears appeals from the judgment of the deemsters; the keys, as a court, only hears appeals from the courts of common law; an appeal may be made, from either of these courts, to the king in council. The island is divided into two districts, each having a deemster, or chief justice; and into six sheadings, or counties, with their respective coroners or sheriffs: one deemster has jurisdiction of the north side, the other of the south side; they decide in all cases where the sum sued for exceeds forty shillings (except actions in which damages are to be assessed, or such as belong to the court of chancery), in all such as respect defamation, slander, or simple breach of peace, and in all appeals from the judgment of the high bailiff; the cause is usually decided at the first hearing, but an appeal may be made to the court of common law, or of chancery, according to circumstances; the deemsters are sworn to 'execute the laws betwixt party and party as indifferently as the herring's back-bone doth lie in the midst of the fish.' A court of common law is held at Castletown and at Ramsey four times a year; these courts decide in civil actions where damages are to be awarded, and in appeals from the deemsters; the governor may preside by the deemster, but the verdict is returned by a jury. A high bailiff resides in each of the four townes, and holds his court there once a week. The parishes of Lonan, Onchan, Braddan and Marown are under the jurisdiction of the high bailiff of Douglas; Malew, Santon, Arbury and Rushen, of the high bailiff of Castletown; Patrick, German, Michael and Ballaugh, of the high bailiff of Peel; and Jurby, Andreas, Bride, Lezayre and Maughold, of the high bailiff of Ramsey. It is the peculiar province of these courts to take cognizance of complaints and debts under forty shillings. The ecclesiastical court takes cognizance of probates of wills, granting letters of administration and tuition, of children's goods, subtracting of tithes, adultery, fornication, swearing and cursing, defamation and drunkenness; and no appeal can be made from its decision. The archdeacon has alternate jurisdiction with the bishop in inferior cases, and holds his court in person, or by his official, as the bishop does by the vicars-general; but important cases are determined by juries, impanelled by the vicars-general. In the court of admiralty causes are determined by a jury of six, usually merchants; damages for false arrests, made by authority of the water-bailiff, are also determined by this court. If a debtor is about to quit the island without satisfying his creditors, the water-bailiff may, upon affidavit being made to that effect, issue his warrant to detain him in custody for twenty-four hours, but not longer, this time being deemed amply sufficient for procuring a regular arrest. The coroners are the chief peace officers, and are to arrest any one who breaks it; they put the governor's warrants into execution, impanel juries, execute the sentences of the courts of law, and perform some other civil duties—but they do not, in any case, act as judges; the lockmen or bailiffs are their officers, and the constables are similar to those of England. Each parish has a captain, whose name is marked, in the directory, 'c. p.' Of the ecclesiastical government few particulars are requisite, as both it and the established religion are the same as in England, and the Manx hierarchy is the Bishop of Sodor and Man, who owns the Archbishop of York as his metropolitan: this bishopric is in the patronage of the crown, and an attempt was lately made by government to annex these to that of Carlisle. The revenue is two-fold—that arising to his Majesty from the duties on imports and exports; and that which is imposed by the local government on dogs, wheeled carriages and public houses. The island is divided into seventeen parishes, denominated 'kirks,' which, besides the townes of Douglas, Castletown, Ramsey and Peel (each appended to its respective parish), will be found in a subjoined table with their population.

ANDREAS PARISH

IS four miles in length from north to south, and about two and a half in width from east to west; situate in the Ayre sheading, in the northern part of the island—the parish church being four miles and a half north-west of Ramsey. This parish is principally under cultivation, as it is mostly low or level land; but it comprises no village worthy of description. The church was rebuilt in 1800, and contains seven hundred sittings; the living is a rectory in the gift of the crown; within this edifice is a handsome marble font (in a former age the property of Philip I, of France), presented to the parish by Mr. Corlett. Near Ballacurry is a quadrangular encampment, generally supposed to have been constructed by Cromwell's troops during the parliamentary war. An annual fair is held in the parish on the 11th of December.

ARBORY PARISH, WITH THE VILLAGE OF COLBY.

ARBORY is a fertile parish in the sheading of Rushen and southern division of the island; bounded on the east by the parish of Malew, and on the west by that of Rushen; it is about six miles in length from north to south, and two in breadth from east to west. The church, which is situate near the centre of the parish, is two miles and a half north-west of Castletown; the living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the crown. The parochial school, which is at Ballacraue, has an endowment of about £8. per annum. Two ancient small churches, in ruins, and several druidical remains, are found in this parish. There are two annual cattle fairs—the first held at Ballabeg on the 28th October, and the second at Colby on the 6th December.

COLBY is a small rural village, nearly one mile west of the parish church, and three miles north-west of Castletown. In 1833 the Wesleyan methodists erected a chapel at Colby Bridge, and in the same year the primitive methodists raised another place of worship at the same place.

BALLAUGH PARISH AND VILLAGE.

BALLAUGH is a parish in the sheading of Michael, in the northern division of the island; in length, from north to south, about five miles, and in breadth, from east to west, about three. The northern part is level and fertile—the southern mountainous and comparatively barren. The old parish church, erected in 1717, about one mile and a half north of the village of Ballaugh, is rapidly mouldering to decay; but a new one, dedicated to St. Mary, containing six hundred sittings, situate about a quarter of a mile north-west of the village, was completed in 1832; the living is a rectory, at the disposal of the crown. At a short distance from Ballaugh are several pits of shell-marl, out of which many fossil remains of elks, &c., have been extracted: a gigantic and complete skeleton of one of those animals, obtained from these pits, is in the museum of the Edinburgh university; and a well-preserved head and horns are to be seen in the shop of Mr. Gell, Douglas: the head is one foot nine inches long, each horn five feet two inches in length—the palms are fourteen inches wide, and the tips of the horns seven feet three inches asunder.

BALLAUGH is a long straggling village in the above parish, situate on the road from Ramsey to the towns of Peel, Douglas, &c.; nearly seven miles west of Ramsey, nine north-east of Peel, and eighteen north of Douglas. This village contains a brewery, and there is another at Ballacroscha. The population of the place is about three hundred. Annual fairs, for cattle, are held on the 15th of May and the 25th of August.

BRIDE PARISH,

WHICH lies in the sheading of Ayre, forms the most northern part of the Island. It is three miles and a half in length from north to south, by a mean breadth from east to west of about two miles. The church is four miles and a half north of Ramsey; the living is in the gift of the crown. There are besides two Methodist chapels in the parish. The surface is level, with a few gentle elevations. The point of Ayre, the most northern part of the parish and of the island, stretches out to a considerable distance into the sea, and is very dangerous to shipping; but a light-house, which is one hundred and six feet in height, affords assistance in guiding the mariner.

CASTLETOWN, BALLASALLA, AND MALEW PARISH.

CASTLETOWN is a well-built respectable market town in the parish of Malew, and is the capital of the island, being the seat of the insular government; it is 12 miles s. of Peel, 16 s. of Kirk Michael, 25 s. w. of Ramsey, 4 E. of Port St. Mary, and 9½ s. w. of Douglas. There is little in the way of manufacturing here; but from the frequent sittings of different courts of law, and the number of pupils educated at the college, the town generally presents an animated appearance. Considerable quantities of agricultural produce are brought to the market-place, which forms a fine area, almost square, ornamented in the centre with a chaste fluted freestone column, nearly fifty feet high, in the Grecian style, erected in 1836 to the memory of the late venerable Lieutenant-Governor C. Smelt; the column will shortly be surmounted by a colossal statue. The town consists of several good streets, all clean and in good repair. Over the small river which forms the port is a stone bridge for carriages, and below that is a wooden draw-bridge for foot passengers. The bay is spacious, but rocky; and the harbour is still only capable of admitting small vessels, though in this year (1837) it has received some improvements, and has been deepened about four feet; the pier is terminated by a lighthouse. In the centre of the town stands Castle Rushen, a most noble specimen of Gothic architecture, which, according to tradition, was built by Gutrud in 960; the workmen who were making some alterations in the castle in 1815, however, found a beam bearing the date of '947;' it is, therefore, naturally conjectured that the castle was erected in that year. The walls are from seven to twelve feet thick, from seventy to eighty feet high, and the limestone of which they are composed is as fresh as though it had been taken from the quarry only a few years since. Robert Bruce, King of Scotland, besieged this fortress for six months, in the year 1313; it is now used as the permanent prison of the island, and also for holding the insular courts. Those of the chancery and exchequer are held on the first Thursday of every month except January and September, but if necessary special courts are called; a court of common law sits in February, May, July and October; a court of general goal delivery takes place twice a year, and often should the lieutenant-governor deem it requisite; the deems'ter's court sits every alternate Monday, the water bailiff's and high bailiff's courts every Saturday, the insular debtors' court in the months of February and August, the house of keys' court once a year, and a Tynwald court the 5th July.

The places of worship are the parish church, one mile and a quarter north of Castletown—the living in the gift of the crown; St. Thomas's chapel, forming part of King William's College; and St. Mary's chapel, on one side of the parade; the latter, which was first erected in 1698, and rebuilt in 1826, is a chaplaincy in the gift of the governor. The Wesleyan and primitive methodists, and independents, have each a chapel; and there is also one for Roman catholics, on College-green, in which service has not yet been performed. Half a mile north-east of the town, and about three hundred yards from the shore, stands King William's College, one of the finest public buildings in the Isle, erected in 1830 in the early English style; it is two hundred and ten feet long and one hundred and thirty-five feet broad, including St. Thomas's chapel, which stretches from the centre at right angles with the college; from the intersection rises a square embattled tower, ninety-seven feet high. The buildings cost upwards of £6,500; the accumulated funds left for educational and other purposes in the hands of trustees, supplied £2,692. 1s. 5d., and the rest was furnished by voluntary subscriptions, or still remains to be paid. More than one hundred and fifty pupils, chiefly boarders, are educated in the college at present, and are prepared for the British and Irish universities, and for the professions; two students are educated on the foundation for the Manx church. The college contains four spacious class-rooms, and a library is attached to the institution. There is an excellent grammar-school in College-lane, and also a national school; in the latter, fifty boys and fifty girls are educated. Halsall's school, in the same street, is for the education, free, of twenty children; and Taubman's school, in College-green, is for teaching twenty-five boys navigation, and the usual branches of learning, gratuitously. The market-house and assembly-rooms were built in 1830, and are situate in the centre of the town. The weekly market is held on Saturday.

BALLASALLA is a village of prepossessing and respectable appearance, consisting of about one hundred houses; it is situate in the parish of Malew, nearly two miles north of Castletown, at the point where the Peel and Douglas roads separate. This is the largest and most English-looking village in the island; the roads in the vicinity are generally lined with neatly cut hedge-rows; and the country around being well sheltered with wood, and varied by gently-swelling eminences, the prospects, though not very extensive, are pleasing. Not far from Ballasalla are extensive lime-works, and an ochre and umber manufactory; and in the village are a tannery and a brewery. The primitive and the Wesleyan methodists have each a chapel, and the Malew parish school is likewise here. Two fairs are held annually, on 12th August and 29th September. MALEW parish is situate in the sheading of Rushen, in the southern division of the island, and is comparatively very extensive, being eight miles in length from north to south, and at least four in breadth from east to west. Besides the parish church, there is a chapel of ease, dedicated to St. Mark, situate about five miles north of Castletown; the living is a chaplaincy, in the gift of the crown. The parish also contains two primitive and two Wesleyan methodist chapels. A great portion of the parish is fertile, and the northern part, which is mountainous and not susceptible of tillage, has several slate quarries, and likewise produces lead ore. Two annual fairs are held at St. Mark's—one on the 5th January, the other on the 12th May.

POST OFFICE, Castle-street, CASTLETOWN, Mary Joyner, Post Mistress—Letters to DOUGLAS and all parts are despatched (by foot post) every day (Sunday excepted) in time for the mail, and arrive in the morning in summer; in winter they are despatched every Tuesday and Friday afternoon about two, and arrive the same morning at ten.

DOUGLAS,

WITH THE PARISHES OF BRADDAN AND ONCHAN AND THE VILLAGE OF KIRK ONCHAN.

DOUGLAS, the most considerable town and seaport in the island, is 10 miles N.E. of Castletown, 11 nearly E. of Peel, 16 s. of Ramsey, 72 N.W. of Liverpool, 40 s. W. of Whitehaven, 75 N.E. by E. of Dublin, and 144 s. of Greenock. This town is delightfully situate on a river and at the south-eastern angle of a bay of the same name, fronting to the eastward; and is connected in civil matters with the parish of Onchan, and in eccle-iasical with that of Braddan. The old streets are for the most part singularly irregular, crooked and narrow, though they contain many excellent houses, shops and inns; all the modern streets, terraces, &c., are, however, pleasant and tasteful. The general shape of the town is triangular, and, in this respect, it has been compared to the Manx Arms, which are three legs, with the appropriate motto of 'Stabit quocunque jeceris,' referring to its insular situation regarding the three kingdoms. Douglas is well supplied with water, from a reservoir constructed a little above the Crescent; and brilliantly lighted with gas, by a company whose works are situate on the south quay. The harbour is esteemed the best dry one in the Irish sea, and admits vessels of considerable burthen—the depth of water, at spring tides, being from twelve to twenty feet. Several surveys have been made, of late years, with the design of making Douglas bay a harbour of refuge for vessels navigating the Irish sea: Sir William Hillary, Bart., wrote a pamphlet upon this important subject in 1826; in 1835, Sir John Rennie published the report of his survey of the bay of Douglas, recommending the construction of various works; and in the same year Captain Denham, of the royal navy, was deputed by the dock trustees of Liverpool to survey the bay of Douglas, and report on its capabilities for being rendered a harbour of the description so much wanted: this report proposed the erection of certain works, the immense outline of which seemed to form an insurmountable obstacle to the accomplishment of the desired object; still, however, the more it was considered, the necessity for forming such a haven became the more apparent: it has been proved that a very large amount of property, sometimes exceeding £50,000. annually, has been lost between the coasts of Britain and Ireland, from the destitution of an asylum to protect merchandize and life. A new jetty, from the opposite shore to the harbour, is now in progress of erection; it will project about two hundred feet, and extend a sheltering arm to the present point. In 1833 a Tower of Refnge was erected on St. Mary's rock, as a beacon and also a retreat for mariners shipwrecked in the bay of this coast. One of the most attractive features in the contour of Douglas is the beautiful stone pier, erected by government at an expense of £22,000; it is five hundred and twenty feet in length and forty in breadth, well flagged, and its eastern extremity ornamented by a beautiful and serviceable lighthouse; it is the favourite promenade of the beauty and fashion of the place, and is frequently enlivened by the bustle incidental upon the arrival of steam and other vessels with passengers. At low water the walk along the north shore is extremely pleasant; and at flood tide the goodness of the sands, and the uncorrupted purity of the ocean wave, render it one of the most agreeable bathing-places in this part of Europe. Bathing machines are provided by different parties; hot, cold, shower and vapour baths are constructed, in a neat and comfortable manner, by Mr. Geneste, in Bath-place, and by Mr. Heron at his hotel—the latter edifice once the princely castle of the Duke of Athol; it is now fitted up in a style not excelled, probably, in the empire; it has accommodation for one hundred and fifty visitors at the same moment—and the woods, lawns and gardens are proportionately extensive: the castle is nearly a mile north of Douglas, bordering on the beach. The town contains many convenient and respectable inns and hotels; and, for those who prefer private domicile, lodgings of the most genteel and comfortable character may be readily obtained. Douglas supports public libraries, news-rooms and billiard-rooms; and dancing and card assemblies are frequent. The curious may amuse themselves by an inspection of a comprehensive and well selected museum, open in Great George-street; and a closer approximation to English sociality was formed here in 1829, by the establishment of a Unit-d Service club. Opposite the pier, on the hill side, stand Fort Anne and Harold Tower, two well situated and agreeable mansions—the former particularly worthy of notice as being the property and residence of Sir William Hillary, the humane founder of the Royal National Institution for the preservation of life from shipwreck, which has been the means of rescuing upwards of four thousand individuals from a watery grave, since its formation in 1824. and who is also president of the Isle of Man District Association, established for a similar benevolent purpose; a complete set of Manby's apparatus is always kept in readiness at the life-boat store-room, on the pier. The neighbourhood of Douglas is well wooded, and embellished with many elegant mansions—affording pleasing and varied landscapes, although limited in extent. Horse-races will in future be held annually, on a course formed in this year (1837), about half a mile above the village of Kirk Onchan, and two miles and a half north of the town. Boating parties are numerous and frequent, and a regatta takes place in the spacious bay.

The manufactures of Douglas are not of much importance, except the long-established one for linen and sail-cloth of Messrs. Moore; another, for coarse and fine woollen cloths and blankets, at Union Mills, about three miles on the road to Peel, now worked by Messrs. M'Williams & Co.; and a third, for paper, about four miles north. Among the leading branches of trade are an iron foundry, two extensive ship-building yards, seven tanneries, eight breweries, and a soap manufactory; and few places furnish the necessary and ornamental articles of household furniture, &c., in greater perfection. From the Douglas press issue four newspapers weekly, and one monthly; they are excellently conducted, and deservedly well supported. As this is the only port into which wines, spirits, colonial produce, &c., are allowed to be imported under the present fiscal laws, the town, and especially the pier and quay, generally present a scene of considerable bustle and activity. The number of vessels belonging to the port at the present time is 60, registering 2,200 tons, trading with France, Holland, Spain, Portugal, Prussia, the Hanseatic towns, &c. The custom-house was formerly the insular residence of his Grace the Duke of Athol, prior to the erection of Mona Castle. The court-house, which is situate on the pier, is a plain substantial edifice: in it the southern deemster holds a court once a fortnight, and the vicar-general one within the same period; the high bailiff opens his court every Saturday, and a chapter court is held in the spring and autumn.

The places of worship are numerous and respectable. St. Matthew's church was built in 1711, and contains nearly three hundred sittings; St. George's, situate on an eminence behind Athol-street, will accommodate a congregation of upwards of eight hundred; St. Barnabas', erected in 1833, and ornamented with a handsome spire, one hundred and forty feet high, possesses twelve hundred sittings, seven hundred being free; and an old man of war, fitted up as a mariner's chapel, affords convenient room for two hundred hearers: the livings are all curacies, in the gift of the bishop. The dissenting chapels are for independents, primitive and Wesleyan methodists, and presbyterians; the Roman catholics occupy a spacious room in Athol-street, formerly used for the purpose of theatrical representations. The educational institutions of Douglas are most efficient, particularly the boarding and preparatory schools: the national school, built in 1810, is capable of accommodating one thousand pupils: a school of industry for boarding and educating eight girls was established in 1836, and an excellent infants' school in the present year. There are many other benevolent and charitable institutions in the town, which evince the philanthropic spirit that exists amongst the inhabitants of Douglas. The house of industry, or work-house, is a handsome and extensive structure, with a square tower in the centre; it was completed in 1837, partly by means of a grant from government, and partly by subscriptions. The market-place, erected by a company in the same year, is very spacious, with an extensive range of stalls on each side a spacious area; over the latter it is intended to form a commodious assembly-room. The market, which is held on Saturday, is well supplied with provisions of all kinds, and fish may be obtained any day in the week at a very reasonable price. An annual fair is held on the 12th November.

BRADDAN parish is situate on the east coast, in the middle sheading, and in the southern division of the island; in extent it is about eleven miles from north to south, and one to five from east to west. The surface is pretty equally divided into hill and dale; the former is clothed with verdure—the latter is very fertile, and agreeably interspersed with wood. The parish church stands in a beautiful situation, nearly two miles from Douglas, on the road to Peel, and is surrounded by some of the finest timber in the island; it is a plain edifice, rebuilt in 1730; the living is a vicarage, in the gift of the bishop. The parish likewise contains a small chapel of ease, at Baldwin, dedicated to St. Luke, erected in 1836; the living is a curacy, in the gift of the bishop. There are, also, two Wesleyan chapels, and one belonging to the primitive methodists, exclusive of those in the town of Douglas.

The parish of ONCHAN lies in the same sheading and division as that of Braddan; it is of more regular form, however—extending, from north to south, about four miles, and five from east to west. The parish church, dedicated to St. Peter, is situate in the village, about two miles north-east of Douglas; the living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the crown. The Wesleyan methodists have a small chapel in the village, and one about a mile to the north of it. Kirk Onchan village is pleasantly situate on the east road from Douglas to Ramsey, and contains from forty to fifty houses.

LEZAYRE PARISH AND VILLAGE OF SULBY.

LEZAYRE (OR CHRIST-LEZAYRE) parish is in the sheading of Ayre and northern division of the Isle; it is of considerable extent, being seven miles in length from N. to S. and five in breadth from E. to W. The parish church is situate two miles west from Ramsey, on the south side of the main road—the living is a vicarage, in the gift of the crown. The northern part of this district is composed of fine rich land, and presents some respectable mansions to the eye of the traveller; the rest is mountainous and sterile, the most southern portion being occupied by the lofty Snafeld, the highest elevation in the island, overlooking the surrounding sea, and embracing within its horizon the shores of the neighbouring countries.

SULBY, the only village worthy of notice in Lezayre parish, consists of a few houses ranged on the side of the main road to Ramsey, four miles west of that town, and contains an extensive brewery and a corn-mill. Two fairs are annually held at this village; one takes place on the 4th June, the other on the 23d July.

LONAN PARISH AND THE VILLAGE OF LAXEY.

LONAN is a mountainous parish in the sheading of Garff, on the east coast, between Manghold and Onchan; nearly four miles long from north to south, and about three in breadth from east to west. Much of the surface is barren and unsusceptible of culture; but the lower grounds are productive, and the valleys fertile. The sea bordering this district abounds with fish. Several memorials of the early ages arrest the attention of the observer in this parish—particularly two druidical temples; one on the north side of Laxey Hill, and the other about two miles from Laxey, near the road leading to Douglas. The parish church is situate on an elevated site; the living is a vicarage, in the appointment of the crown.

LAXEY is a small fishing and manufacturing village in the above parish, eight miles north-east of Douglas MAROWN PARISH AND THE VILLAGE OF CROSBY.

MAROWN parish lies in the southern division of the island, in the sheading of Glanfaba; it is the only parish in the Isle of Man not washed by the sea, and is upwards of five miles in length by an average breadth of two and a half. The small parish church is five miles west of Douglas, and six and a half east of Peel, standing on a hill about half a mile south of the road between these towns; the living is a vicarage, in the gift of the crown. The eastern, central and western parts of this district are in excellent condition, being well cultivated; but the northern and southern portions are hilly, and comparatively unproductive. There are two vestiges of antiquity to be observed in this parish—the ruins of St. Trinian's chapel, a little beyond Crosby; and a druidical temple, on the north side of Mount Murray. A fair is annually held at Greba, in this district, on the 2nd of February. Crosby is a small but respectable village, on the road between Douglas and Peel; five miles west of the former, and about the same distance east of the latter. The Wesleyan methodists have a neat chapel at this village, close by the border of the high road.

MICHAEL PARISH AND THE VILLAGE OF KIRK-MICHAEL.

MICHAEL parish is situate in the sheading of its name, in the northern division of the island; it is five miles and a half in length from north to south, and four in breadth from east to west. Those portions of the district that margin the shore, and the northern tracts, are fertile and well cultivated; but the principal part is studded with lofty hills, that seem to defy the efforts of the agriculturist at reclamation. The village of KIRK-MICHAEL is 16 miles north of Douglas, the like distance from Castletown, seven north-east of Peel, and nine west of Ramsey; situate on the main road from the last-named town, not far from the sea-shore. At the south end of the village is a comfortable inn and a court-house; in the latter the northern deemster holds his court once a fortnight, and the vicar-general sits on the last Thursday of each month. The new parish church, dedicated to Saint Michael, and erected in 1835, is an ornament to the village; the crown appoints to the living, which is a vicarage: the church-yard contains the remains of many of the bishops; the inscription on the tomb of Bishop Wilson, to the east of the church, is worthy of notice on account of its primitive simplicity. Near the church gate is a high, square, rustic pillar of blue stone, covered over with singularly involved devices, which tradition attributes to the honour of a Norwegian chief. About a mile to the east, on the road to Ramsey, is Bishops' Court, the episcopal residence of and the head of the Manx church. A fair is held for cattle, and hiring servants, on the 10th of October.

PATRICK PARISH,

WHICH lies on the western shore of the island, in the sheading of Glanfabra, extends six miles from north to south, by a mean breadth of three from east to west. The parish church is situate in the northern part of the district, one mile and a half south of Peel: this parish was connected with that of German till the year 1714, when a separation took place, and the present church was erected; the bishop is vested with the patronage of the living, which is a vicarage. The district is mountainous, and (with the exception of the deep vales, which are fertile,) totally unproductive to the agriculturist; but the minerals that it imbosoms amply compensate for the sterility of the surface. The principal mines are those of lead, situate at Foxdale, and on the west side of South Barrule; they are wrought by the Isle of Man Mining Compy. who employ about two hundred and fifty individuals; they produce from two hundred and eighty to three hundred tons of ore per month, which is shipped at Peel and Douglas for the river Dee. The beautiful waterfall of Glenmoy (or Glenmoji) is situate on the west coast, three miles south of Peel, and is visited by most strangers.

PEEL,

WITH THE PARISH OF GERMAN, AND THE VILLAGE OF ST. JOHN'S.

PEEL is a small sea-port, in the parish of German, 16 miles from Ramsey, 12 n. of Castletown, 11 n.w. of Douglas, and seven from Kirk-Michael; situate nearly in the centre of the western coast of the island. The town, which is composed of five irregular streets and some lanes, is chiefly remarkable for the ruins of its castle and cathedral, which stand on a small islet of rock, about three hundred yards from the town: the walls are flanked with towers, and inclose an area of about two acres, now converted into a sheep-walk; it is supposed to be of higher antiquity than even Castle Rushen, and in it some of the early kings of Scotland are said to have received their education; a strong stone wall connects the castle with the main land.

Before the purchase of the royalty of Man, this fortress was garrisoned by troops in the pay of the proprietor of the island; and the natives have a tradition that a black dog, called in their language 'Moddey Doo,' used to present himself every night before the fire, to the consternation of the guard; on this old tradition Sir Walter Scott has founded his allusion, in the 'Lay of the last Minstrel,' to the 'spectre hound of Man.' (The appearance of the castle, from the south shore, is faithfully displayed in the vignette, on the map of the island, which embellishes this work.) The cathedral of St. Germain was erected about the year 1245, and the remaining arches of the transept sufficiently testify its former magnificence. This islet likewise contains the ruins of a church dedicated to St. Patrick, besides the fragments of other structures. The port has the convenience of a good quay, erected in 1810, with a lighthouse at its extremity; and a jetty of substantial masonry was constructed in 1830, by the commissioners of the harbour, as a protection from the heavy swell of the Irish sea. The herring fishery may be considered the staple business of Peel; there are, however, several other branches of some consequence, as two breweries, a tanyard, boat-building yards, and a corn-mill; the town also possesses an excellent, well established inn, called the 'Peel Castle.'

The places of worship are the parish church, and chapels for Wesleyan and primitive methodists: the church, which stands in the western part of the town, and is dedicated to St. Peter, was rebuilt in 1816; the living is a vicarage, in the gift of the bishop. The grammar-school of Peel was endowed so early as 1746, and the mathematical school was founded in 1763; there is, also, another seminary, supported by funds bequeathed by Philip Christian, in 1654, for educational purposes. The neighbourhood of Peel is very pleasant, and contains many respectable family mansions, some surrounded by fine timber. Parties of pleasure to the mountain-torrent fall of Glenmoir, three miles to the south-west, are frequent, particularly on the arrival of visitors to this part of the Isle. The rocks along the southern shore are in some places hollowed into caves by the incessant operations of the sea; and on the northern strand aetes and cornelians, fit for seals and brooches, are occasionally picked up. A weekly market is held on Saturday, and an annual fair for cattle on the 28th of March.

GERMAN parish is situate in the sheading of Glanfabla, on the western and southern coast of the island; it extends about four miles and a half from north to south, and three and a half from east to west; the surface is much diversified with hills and valleys, the latter very fertile and productive.

ST. JOHN'S is a small village, three miles east of Peel and seven west of Douglas, consisting of a few houses skirting the spacious green on which stands the Tynwald mount, whence every law is promulgated to the people: the form of the mount is circular; it is about eighteen feet high, and appears like three platforms of earth placed one above another, the uppermost being attained by a flight of steps cut in the turf on the eastern side. The places of worship are St. John's chapel, situate on the border of the green, and a Wesleyan chapel at its western end. Fairs are annually held here, for cattle, on the 17th of March, 1st of May, 5th of July, and 1st of November.

POST OFFICE, PEEL, LEONORA MUNN, Post Mistress.—Letters to and from DOUGLAS and all parts are despatched and arrive (by foot post) daily in summer; in winter they are despatched every Tuesday and Friday afternoon in time for the steam packet, and arrive the same morning at ten.

RAMSEY WITH THE PARISH OF MAUGHOLD.

RAMSEY is a market town and sea-port, principally in the parish of Maughold; 25 mls. N. E. of Castletown, the like distance N. of Douglas, 16 N. E. of Peel, and 8 N. of Laxey; situate on the north-eastern coast of the island. The houses are well built, the streets mostly spacious, clean and in good repair, but irregularly arranged around the market place, which was much enlarged and improved in 1830, and is now one of the most complete and convenient in the Isle. The bay, in front of the town, is capacious, and affords perfect shelter from all storms not coming from the east; the anchorage is good, and the quay is furnished with a lighthouse. The harbour was materially improved in 1836, by the erection of an additional pier nearly parallel with the old one. From this port the principal part of the cattle, horses, grain and other produce not required for the home market, is shipped; the imports consist of coal, timber, drapery, ironmongery, &c. Many of the inhabitants are engaged, during the season, in the cod and herring fisheries; and Ramsey itself is a place of considerable business: there are three small hat manufactories, two breweries, and two extensive yards for ship-building, from whence vessels of from five hundred to six hundred tons are frequently launched. The river Sulby flows into the harbour of Ramsey; it is considered the largest stream on the island, and contains excellent trout. The road from hence to the Point of Ayre is carried over the river, near the town, by a bridge of three small arches. In 1760 the fleet taken by Commodore Elliot from the French Admiral Thurot, off the western coast of the Isle of Man, was brought into Ramsey bay. The court-house, which was erected in 1800, and repaired and improved in this year (1837), stands near the centre of the town: in it the high bailiff (whose jurisdiction extends over the parishes of Andreas, Bride, Jurby, Lezayre and Maughold,) holds a court every Saturday, for the recovery of debts under forty shillings; the northern deemster, and also the vicar-general, hold courts once a fortnight, and a court of common law sits in the months of February, May, July and October. The town is much resorted to in summer, and every accommodation, either public or private, is afforded to visitors—there being two excellent and comfortable inns, and many most respectable lodging-houses. The sands are remarkably fine, and of great extent; and few places enjoy the advantage of a more inviting beach for sea-bathing. A steam-packet calls three times a week on its voyage to Glasgow, and another communicates with Liverpool; and there are coaches daily from this town to Douglas.

The places of worship are two churches of the establishment—St. Paul's, in the Market-place, and St. Peter's, in Church-street; chapels for Wesleyan and primitive methodists, and the united seceders from the Scotch kirk. There is an excellent national school, likewise a savings' bank, and several sick clubs. The prospect around Ramsey is agreeably diversified and picturesque: the lofty mountains of Snaefell and Barule rear their heads on the south-west; to the west stretches a fine and fertile undulating district, interspersed with neat mansions and sheltering plantations; while to the east the agitated and frequently turbulent blue wave contrasts with the calm scenery on the island. The weekly market, held on Saturday, is well attended; two fairs for cattle annually take place on the 25th March and 8th November. The population of Ramsey amounts, at present, to about 1,900.

MAUGHOLD, a mountainous parish, occupies a portion of the eastern coast, in the sheading of Garff and northern division of the Isle; it extends from north to south about four miles and a half, and three from east to west—having the town of Ramsey on its most northern point, and the bold promontory of Maughold Head on its eastern. The parish church, which is dedicated to St. Maughold, is situate near the headland just named, about three miles from Ramsey, and is a small plain building. A short distance above this edi-rice are the iron mines, lately opened by the Isle of Man and Glasgow Iron Company; the operations hitherto have proved encouraging to the proprietors; the first cargo of this mineral produced here was shipped at Ramsey for Glasgow on the 12th of May in the present year. Several other veins of this useful ore have been ascertained to exist in this parish as well as other parts of the Island.

POST OFFICE, Lezayre-street, RAMSEY, Edward Corlett, Post Master.—Letters to and from DOUGLAS and all parts are despatched and arrive (by foot post) daily in summer, in winter they are despatched every Tuesday and Friday afternoon at four, and arrive the same morning at ten.

RUSHEN PARISH,

THE VILLAGES OF PORT ERIN AND PORT ST. MARY, AND THE CALF OF MAN.

RUSHEN (or CHRIST RUSHEN) parish, in the sheading of its name, lies at the south-western extremity of the island; it is about five miles and a half in length from north to south, by an average breadth of one and a half from east to west. The church, situate four miles west of Castletown, near the centre of the parish, is a plain unadorned edifice, rebuilt in 1775, and adapted to contain a congregation of four hundred and fifty persons; the living is a vicarage, in the gift of the crown. The parish school is adjacent to the church; and about a quarter of a mile to the south is a school for girls, supported by a small endowment. The central part of the district is fertile productive land, and is as well cultivated, perhaps, as any locality in England; but the north and south portions are bleak barren highlands. This parish contains plenty of limestone of the best quality, and lead ore is found in several places: the old mines at Glenshass, between Port St. Mary and Spanish Head, have been re-opened by the Isle of Man Mining Company; the ore from these mines is said to produce two hundred ounces of silver per ton.

PORT ERIN (so called from the bay opening towards Ireland) is a small village and sea-port in the above parish, nearly five miles west of Castletown and 15 south-west of Douglas. The village comprises about forty dwellings, a small Wesleyan chapel, and a comfortable inn; and the employment of the inhabitants is fishing and husbandry. The bay, which forms a natural square, has good anchorage; and vessels of two hundred tons burthen can come close to the rock, on the south side, in favourable weather. Breda Head, a bold and abrupt precipice, forms the north boundary of the bay. Port Erin is the most convenient place for taking a boat for the purpose of visiting the Calf of Man, which is distant about three miles south-west.

PORT ST. MARY (or Port-le-Mary) is a busy prosperous village and sea-port, in the same parish as Port Erin, situate on the western side of a fine spacious bay, on the south shore of the island, four miles west of Castletown, fifteen south of Peel, and the same distance south-west of Douglas. The village consists of about eighty houses, principally erected close to the harbour, which is protected from the violence of the sea by a substantially built stone pier, two hundred and thirty yards long and eight yards broad, with a lighthouse on its northern extremity. To complete the security of the port, a new breakwater is about to be constructed (about two hundred yards south of the present pier), which will afford shelter from any wind. More than fifty light vessels, from fifteen to forty tons burden, belong to this little place; many of them are employed in the fishery during the season. The Carrack rock, near the middle of the bay, is dangerous, being covered at high water. A little south of the village, on the shore, below high-water mark, is a stratified quarry of limestone, of superior quality, from which the new jetty at Douglas, and many other piers and quays, have been constructed. At Mount Gawne, about one mile on the road to Castletown, is the extensive brewery of Messrs. Gawne and Connal. A national school and a Wesleyan methodist chapel, are in the village of Port St. Mary.

The CALF OF MAN is a small island separated from Man by a dangerous channel of five hundred yards width, its area is five hundred and sixty-nine acres, of which nearly one hundred are cultivated; and it contains one farm-house, three cottages and two light-houses: the present occupier, Mr. Shepherd, is erecting a corn-mill and providing a threshing-machine. The surface is uneven—in some places elevated from four to five hundred feet above the sea; and great part of the coast is composed of high rocky cliffs. Rabbits have multiplied here to a somewhat valuable amount, not less than from two thousand four hundred to two thousand eight hundred being annually exported.

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL,

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE.

A VEGETABLE PRODUCTION, universally admired for IMPROVING the growth, and BEAUTIFYING the HUMAN HAIR. Prevents the Hair falling off or turning grey to the latest period of existence.

This OIL, as adding STRENGTH, and brilliantly ORNAMENTING and EMBELLISHING the HUMAN HAIR, the Proprietors can, with truth, aver has not its equal in the world! And the distinguished sanction it has received from ROYAL and ILLUSTRIOUS PERSONAGES, in addition to the flattering testimonials transmitted of its efficacy, places this declaration above suspicion.

If anything, indeed, more than another, be needed as an infallible proof of the celebrity of ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, it is the fact that no known production in the world has so many spurious and base imitations, which a set of unprincipled vendors endeavour to foist on the Public under the lure of being cheap. To prevent such vile imposition, ATTENTION to the following is solicited.

THE LOWEST PRICE OF THE ORIGINAL MACASSAR, OR ROWLAND'S OIL, is THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE PER BOTTLE. The label has the words 'Rowland's Oil,' and between those words are the same minutely engraved twenty-four times, also the Name and Address in Red, on lace-work.

A. ROWLAND & SON, 20, HATTON GARDEN,
Counter-signed ALEX. ROWLAND.

The Counterfeit has the word 'Genuine,' INSTEAD of Rowland's, also omitting the '&' in the Signature—PARTICULAR ATTENTION on purchasing is respectfully solicited, as the Proprietors cannot be responsible for the serious injury resulting from the use of base and cheap IMITATIONS, of injurious quality, now offered to the Public as Rowland's.

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR.

This admirable Specific possesses balsamic properties of surprising energy. It eradicates PIMPLES, SPOTS, REDNESS, and all Cutaneous Eruptions, gradually producing a delicate clear soft Skin; transforms even the most SALLOW COMPLEXION into RADIANT WHITENESS; renders HARSH and ROUGH SKIN beautifully soft, smooth and even; imparts to the FACE, NECK and ARMS a healthy and juvenile bloom.

To MOTHERS NURSING their OFFSPRING it gives, in case of incidental inflammation, immediate relief.

To GENTLEMEN whose Faces are tender after SHAVING, ROWLAND'S KALYDOR will be found excellent; beyond precedent, in ameliorating and allaying that most unpleasant sensation.

Sold in Pint Bottles at 8s. 6d. and in Half Pints at 4s. 6d. each.

TO PREVENT IMPOSITION, the NAME AND ADDRESS, AS ABOVE, IS ENGRAVED ON THE GOVERNMENT STAMP, which is pasted on the cork of each Bottle.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO, OR PEARL DENTIFRICE.

This justly celebrated Dentifrice is a combination of oriental herbal medicament, forming an efficient Vegetable WHITE POWDER, ANTI-SCORBUTIC, and of potent efficacy, though mild in operation, as a thorough exterminator of existing diseases to which the Teeth and Gums are liable, rendering the former perfectly sound, arraying in pure whiteness and fixing firmly in their sockets—producing a Beautiful set of PEARLY TEETH—and endowing the breath with fragrant at once delightful and salubrious. The efficacious virtues of which this is composed constitute it the best Dentifrice ever offered to public notice.

Rowland's original Odonto is recommended by the Faculty, is patronised by the Royal and other distinguished personages, and will uniformly be found, as a renovator of the Teeth and Gums, to exceed even the most sanguine expectation.—Price 2s. 9d. per Box, duty included.—Each Box has the Name and Address on the Government Stamp.—'A. ROWLAND & SON, 20, HATTON GARDEN.'

ROWLAND'S ALSANA EXTRACT,

For immediately relieving the most violent Tooth-Ache, Gum Boils, Swelled Face, &c.; it is also an excellent Stomachic, in cases of Flatulency, Spasmodic Affections, &c. and gives instantaneous relief. Price 2s. 9d.—4s. 6d. and 10s. 6d. per bottle.

Rowland's Cerelæum, for the Head-Ache.

An infallible, instantaneous and permanent reliever of the most inveterate Vertigo, by external application. ROWLAND'S CERELÆUM will be uniformly found to exceed even the most sanguine expectation. In Bottles, at 2s. 9d. each.

The above articles are sold by the Proprietors, A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton Garden,

LONDON.

INDIAN RUBBER.

NEWLY-INVENTED SURGICAL BANDAGES,

For Swelled Legs, Varicose Veins, Weakness in the Knees, Ankles, Wrists, &c. also for the Prevention and Relief of Corpulency.

J. SPARKS,

(SIXTEEN YEARS APPRENTICE AND ASSISTANT TO MR. SHELDRAKE, LATE OF THE STRAND.)

No. 28, Conduit-street, London,

SURGICAL MACHINIST AND BANDAGE MAKER,

Begs to return his grateful thanks to the Medical Profession, Nobility and Gentry, for their kind patronage and support, and respectfully informs them that he has REMOVED from Old Bond-street, to No. 28, Conduit-street, for the convenience of more extensive premises, where he will be enabled to manufacture every Article in the Business under his immediate inspection.

For the last Twenty Years J. S. has been practically engaged in the Business, in addition to which he has received the sanction and patronage of the most eminent Surgeons, and while he hopes for a continuance of the favour with which the Profession, &c. have honoured him, will endeavour to merit the same by strict attention to their commands.

The Elastic Bandages first invented by him have met the approval and recommendation of the first Surgical Authorities. Their superiority over all others consist in their elasticity and lightness, without the aid of metallic springs; giving constant support, and affording an equalized pressure to the part affected (which may be lessened or increased at pleasure), without impeding muscular action. Being composed of Indian Ruaiter Fibres, interwoven with Silk and Cotton, it forms a soft and light texture, and will wash without losing its elasticity; likewise, being porous, will not produce that frequently-injurious heat so much complained of in all other bandages.

The Improved Elastic Stocking for Swelled Legs, Varicose or Enlarged Veins, Anasaruous Swelling, &c. For this purpose the Patent Elastic Stocking is admirably adapted, inasmuch as it gives an equable pressure over the parts affected, while it yields to the varying action of the muscle, superseding the use of the common rollers.

The Elastic Knee-Cap will be of essential service, where the knee-joint requires support after Accident, Inflammation, Synovial Enlargements, Rheumatism, or Gouty Affections, &c.

The Elastic Ankle Sock is to give support after Fractures, Sprains, and Dislocations, and in any case where, from weakness of the part, support may be necessary.

Improved Artificial Legs, Arms, Hands, &c. Hospital Wooden Legs, all kinds of improved Spring Crutches, Trusses, Instruments for every kind of Weakness and Distortion, high-heeled Boots and Shoes, newly-invented Leather SPLINTS, Sliding Arm Slings, Leg Rests, Spinal Couches and Reclining Frames, Artificial Calves for wasted or deformed Limbs, Strait-Waistcoats, &c. Hearing Trumpets, Air Cushions, Pelvis Belts, Elastic, Cotton, and Oil Silk Rolling Bandages, all kinds of Adhesive and Soap Plasters, Bunion and Corn Shields, Urinals, Dumb Bells, &c.

Printed Directions for taking Measures will be forwarded to all parts of the Country, by application (post paid) to 28, Conduit-street, London.

N. B. The above Bandages are entirely free from Brass Wires, or any other Metallic Substance, and are warranted to retain their superior elasticity over all others.

NEW INVENTION.

STEPHENS' WRITING FLUID.

The Inventor of this original Composition for Writing begs to call the attention of the Public to the following facts:—

1st. That the inconveniences of writing with common inks had long been a source of general complaint.—2nd. That to remedy this inconvenience was the subject of his serious occupation and experiment for several years.—3rd. After composing a colour more suitable for writing, his farther investigations were directed to rendering it more capable of resisting the tricks of the imposter, and the effects of time.—4th. That the colour may be imitated by compositions which are deficient in most of the less apparent, but highly essential properties, a fact, which he is ready to demonstrate by experiment.—5th. He has innumerable memoranda and records written with the results of various modes of preparation, to which he can refer, as standing proofs of the best composition and of the best mode of preparation.—Lastly. Unprotected by a patent, he trusts to the merits of the composition, and the preference and protection of a discerning Public, who, he trusts, will not, while they feel the conveniences of the Writing Fluid, forget the encouragement which is due to the original Inventor.

The superiority of this Fluid, over common writing inks, may be summed up under the following heads:—the greater readiness with which it combines with the paper—the ease with which it flows from, and follows the pen, never clogging it as common inks do—the superior blackness which it invariably acquires, free from any admixture of brown—the clearness with which it writes, free from that muddiness which is a prevailing fault of all common thin inks—its bright and distinct colour when first written, whereas thin inks are generally pale—also, its drying so quickly as seldom to require the use of blotting paper. It has the property of retaining its fluidity in the stand to the last, as well in the hottest, as in the coldest weather; having no tendency to become rosy, or glutinous—and lastly, its greater durability; this, it may be objected, is only to be proved by time; but, if when written by the side of other inks, it retains a good colour, after they have undergone a change, its greater permanency may fairly be presumed upon: in addition to this, he has tested it by agents which obliterate common inks, and they fail to erase this composition; so that he can confidently assert, not as a matter of opinion, but of experience, that it has properties of durability greater than any common writing ink. Its quality of resisting the agents used to obliterate common inks, renders it particularly valuable for writing bills of exchange, wills and testamentary documents; and also for log books, journals, and other records on sea voyages; as it proves that it cannot be impaired by sea air and marine waters, as inks commonly are. It is also applicable (as he has been informed by those who have used it) to the Copying Machine.

G. J. & SONS take this opportunity of calling the attention of the Profession, and Trade in general, to their collection of ORNAMENTS, adapted to every style of Decoration and Furniture, which, they flatter themselves, for extent of variety and quality of execution, stands unrivalled, being the result of many years' accumulation, irrespective of cost, either from the finest originals, or under the direction of architects and gentlemen of acknowledged judgment and taste.

Architects and Builders will find this Establishment to afford facilities for the execution of any works they may require by a given time; and as the entire process, from the first modelling to the completion, is executed under the immediate superintendence of G. J. & Sons, they can promise the greatest faithfulness of detail and character in the execution of designs that may be confided to their care; and in ordinary cases, where quantities are required, no charge is made for models, moulds, &c. Their collection embraces a variety of sizes of Caps, from most of the examples—Trusses and Ceiling Flowers, in great variety—as also enriched Ovolo, Oge, and the varied Mouldings adapted for Cornices, Architraves, Doors, Skirtings, &c. Friezes, Soffits, Pateras, Masks, &c. Upholsterers, Carvers, Gilders, Decorators, and the Trade generally, will find here every description of Enriched Decoration that their varied engagements require:—Window Cornices, of various styles and degrees of enrichment, from the simple Greek to the highest style of the prevailing French—Glass Frames, Console and Pier Tables, Brackets, Panelling for Walls, Ceilings, Picture Frames, and the numerous et cetera that the refined taste and luxury of the present age has rendered indispensable.

G. J. & Sons feel that, in attempting to enumerate articles, they rather appear to give limits to that which admits of none; for there is no enrichment which cannot be executed, either in their Original Paste Composition or their Improved Papier Mâché, with a beauty that no other compound admits of. Their stock is generally considerable; and a call from the houses of Scotland, on their visits to the Metropolis, will be esteemed, and they trust satisfactory to those with whom they have not had the honour of an account.—All packages are charged at cost price, and the greatest attention is paid to the shipment and forwarding of goods.

The first part of their collection is just published in lithography, consisting of thirty-four sheets, embracing Ceiling Flowers, Glass Frames, Picture Frames, Mouldings, Tables, Stools, Candelabra, Window Cornices, &c. &c.; being numbered, and the size or scale given, to facilitate selection and the convenience of giving orders.

Among the variety of articles above referred to will be found LOOKING GLASSES of every denomination and size, varying from one foot to eighty feet and upwards PLATE GLASS for windows, carriages, &c. which possess great advantages over crown, and when required for exportation, a considerable drawback obtained.

Or any sizes containing from 3 feet to 8 feet, at 9s. per foot; thus a plate being 30 inches by 18 inches contains 3 feet 9 inches superficial measure, and costs 14. 13s. 9d. as per annexed tariff. All under three feet superficial at a reduction.

CARVING AND GILDING IN ALL ITS BRANCHES.

In this department will be found a very elegant and extensive variety of Chimney and Pier Glass Frames, Cornices for Windows, Ornamental Tables and Furniture, and richly mounted Frames in various sizes for Portraits, Paintings, &c. Paintings and Prints mounted, framed, and regilt.

PAPER HANGING, AND INTERIOR DECORATIONS,

in all its branches, from the most simple to the first style of elegance. A rich variety of new patterns on show.

IN THE UPHOLSTERY ARRANGEMENT

the greatest attention is paid to unite elegance with economy in character for the drawing-room, houndoir, dining-room, library, and bed-chambers, from the most quiet to the most costly styles, in the various articles of chintzes, moreens, damasks, silks, &c. A great variety of the most splendid and novel styles are constantly on view of these qualities which can alone ensure permanent satisfaction; the extreme disparity in prices in these articles, mainly arises from the inferiority of the fabric.

CABINET, CHAIR, AND SOFA WORK,

manufactured of the most seasoned materials. In the finish of Chairs, Sofas, &c. much depends on the quality of the materials used, and the workmanship. It may not be unworthy of remark that a similar effect may be produced at a saving of nearly one half, but which in the wear must eventually prove a serious disappointment to the purchaser. This applies also to the manufacture of Cabinet Goods, which from being made of unseasoned materials and unsound work (that cannot be detected by the casual observer), can never be of that service and durability so essential. H. L. C. begs to add that he manufactures them on his own premises, and has always on hand a large stock of well-seasoned materials, which enables him to produce work at the lowest possible rate, and of a superior quality.

STEAM and SAILING VESSELS promptly fitted up with CABIN FURNITURE and PASSENGERS' REQUISITES.

SOLID and PORTABLE Furniture, Bedding, Musquito hangings, &c. for Foreign Climates. Families going abroad will receive every information respecting the articles best adapted for their particular destinations. Merchants, Captains, and Dealers, supplied with the utmost dispatch on the most liberal terms.

CARPETING

of the fabric especially made for the first upholstery houses, viz. Brussels, Kidderminster, and Venetian; also a few of the much-admired velvet pile carpets, hearth rugs, druggets, baize, floor cloth, &c.

BEDDING, BLANKETS, &c.

well seasoned, real Dantzic feathers, also equally prepared, light downy feathers for second and third rate beds, elastic spring, hair, and wool mattresses, real Witney, fine Bath and York blankets, Marseilles quilts and counterpanes. In the article of bedding, blankets, &c. so essentially important to all, H. L. C. is determined that no trader shall supply them on better terms.

Families in the country may command the most approved taste, by being waited on at home with patterns; and designs made on the spot, calculated to harmonize with the plans, proportions, and decorations of the rooms; and their orders delivered and fixed on terms, forming a very small addition to the first cost, by the system adopted in this concern.

With this short enumeration of the leading articles of his trade, and the very favourable terms on which he undertakes to supply them, HENRY L. COOPER appeals to all classes for a continuation of that flattering preference hitherto afforded his house, 93, Bishopsgate-street-within; Western Branch, 57, Conduit-street, nine doors from Regent-street.

H. L. C. begs respectfully to solicit particular attention to the address; also, that any article will by exchanged, should a fair objection arise, thus securing the public from risk.

This invaluable substitute for the Black of Frankfort, which, from its remarkable smoothness and density of colour, has recently received the sanction of the National Society for the Encouragement of Arts and Sciences in Paris (who have been pleased, in testimony of their approval, to present the Inventor, Mr. BOUJOU, with a Silver Medal), is now to be obtained by application to I. DENIZARD, Sole Agent for the Sale, at his Depôt, No. 15, Brewer-street, Golden-square, London; to whom, upon reference, may be had a printed report from the above Society, as well as the favourable recommendation of some of the most eminent Copper-plate Printers, both of Paris and London.

I. DENIZARD begs to submit his prices to the public, and to solicit one trial. It will be found that 2,000 impressions may be procured, where 1,500 could not be using the ordinary German Black:—

The principle by which the ENGLISHMAN is guided, is the advocacy of the greatest extent of freedom, consistent with that stability of our national institutions without which there can be no security for property, and consequently no permanent occupation for the labouring classes.

To our Catholic and Dissenting fellow-citizens we desire to extend every concession not calculated to lead to the destruction of our National Church, the maintenance of which we consider necessary more particularly to the poorer classes. At the same time we shall warmly co-operate with the Catholics and Dissenters in their endeavours to obtain the repeal of every species of tax levied for the support of our own Church; fully convinced that its real property, assisted by the voluntary contributions of its own members, is amply sufficient to maintain its ministers in a proper degree of comfort and dignity, without the aid of any general assessment or impost whatever.

To the Agriculturist, the Merchant, and Tradesman, the ENGLISHMAN affords every facility. No pains are spared to give the domestic, colonial and foreign markets as full and complete as possible.

It is also our wish to make the ENGLISHMAN a welcome visitor in every family; and with this view a large portion of our space will be devoted to light and amusing matter, avoiding as much as possible every kind of triviality; and to one point we pledge ourselves—that at no time shall any article be admitted into our columns calculated to raise a blush upon the face of any really modest female.

This Society is the oldest Institution in existence for granting Assurances on Lives. Its principle is purely that of Mutual Assurance. Every person assured for the whole of life is a Member of the Corporation; and the whole of the Profits are distributed equally among the Representatives of the deceased Members without reference to the length of time the Policy has been in force.

A Bonus of 25 per cent. is guaranteed to be paid on every claim arising by the death of a Member till the 5th of April, 1841.

Persons effecting Assurances for Terms of Years, or on Joint Lives or Survivorships, may also participate in the Profits by paying a proportionate Premium.

THORN'S TALLY HO! SAUCE,

So long patronised by Epicures and Families of the first distinction, in all parts of the world, for its peculiar warm and rich qualities, a trial of which will induce those of delicate appetite to continue a zest not to be obtained by any other sauce. It is in high repute, and indispensable where economy reigns, for Fish, Game, Curries, Venison, Maintenon, Cutlets, Chops, Steaks, Hashes, and all Made Dishes; a great improver and excellent colouring for Gravies. In bottles 2s. and 4s. each.

"We have tried (Crede experto) THORN'S Tally-ho Sauce, and can pronounce it exquisite. We know nothing of the ingredients; that we leave to such as are more 'curious in fish-sauce' than we are; but we speak to the richness of its flavour, which, to our thinking, would create an appetite under the ribs of death."—Satirist.

THORN'S POTTED YARMOUTH BLOATERS.

This delicate and delicious preparation of the Finest Yarmouth Bloaters, cured especially, and in a peculiar manner, after the Proprietor's instructions, is particularly recommended as being free from the rancid, oily, salt flavour so generally complained of. When dressed in the usual way, and the old system of curing, it will be found an excellent relish, and is strongly recommended, by several Epicures and the Lovers of that delightful fish, for Toast, Sandwich, Biscuits, and as a fine relish for Wine, and also as an excellent substitute for Russian Caviare. In pots at 1s. and 2s. each.

"We have tasted 'THORN'S Potted Bloaters for Toast, Sandwiches, &c.:' it is, indeed, quite a delicacy, and none of our friends proceeding to India and the Colonies, should, on any account, be without a supply—we certainly give it a decided preference over any thing of the kind that ever came under our notice."—Alexander's East India Magazine.

Each sold wholesale at the Warehouse, 223, High Holborn, and by all Wholesale Oilmen and Druggists in London; and retail by one or more agents in every town throughout the United Kingdom.—Each warranted in all climates.

CAUTION!—The Proprietor, being aware of several spurious compositions that are daily offered to the public under the name of Potted Bloaters, begs them to observe his signature, ALEX. THORN, on the side of the pot, without which it cannot be genuine.

WITH ENGRAVINGS,

THE EVANGELICAL REGISTER;

OR

Magazine for Promoting the Spread of the Gospel.

This widely circulated Periodical has now been upwards of thirteen years before the Public. Originally it was, like other Magazines, the organ of only ONE of the many Denominations of Christians—now, as its title indicates (being a “MAGAZINE FOR PROMOTING THE SPREAD OF THE GOSPEL,”) it is no longer confined to a single branch of the Church of Christ, but its pages are thrown open to the insertion of all matters interesting both to Churchmen and Dissenters; to all, in fact, who make the Bible the foundation of their hopes and the standard of their faith. While every other existing Religious Periodical is compelled to advocate the principles and interests of the particular Sect or Denomination under whose authority it is published—depending, of necessity, on them for their circulation—THE EVANGELICAL REGISTER being entirely free from such influence, its Conductors endeavour, by the blessing of God upon their labours, to shew how much all Christians have in common, instead of keeping alive those dissensions and divisions which are at once the bane and disgrace of the Religious World.

A medium of communication, such as it is the aim of the Conductors of THE EVANGELICAL REGISTER to make their Magazine, has long been wanting: one that will fearlessly and faithfully strive to throw down the strong-holds of Impiety and Infidelity; and to remove those stumbling-blocks which have been too long permitted to impede the progress of that harmony which ought to prevail amongst all classes of Christians. Being independent, the Editors are determined fearlessly to uphold those principles which, in their judgment, may best conduce to the glory of God; to encourage every institution calculated to promote the spiritual welfare of their fellow-mortals: and unhesitatingly to expose all who shall pander to party feeling or exercise oppression. They will ever, to their utmost ability, endeavour to inculcate good-will towards all men, and to promote the usefulness and prosperity of those religious, benevolent, and charitable institutions which are the glory of our land

The monthly contents of the Magazine consist of Essays on Religious Subjects, chiefly of a practical tendency; Original Poetry; Biographical Memoirs; Reviews of New Publications; Proceedings of Religious, Charitable, and Philanthropic Societies; Original Correspondence, Documents, Ordinations, Settlements, New Churches and Chapels; and all other information suited to a Religious Publication.

The Editors invite particular attention to the Series of Papers commenced during the past year, and continued in the present Volume (written expressly for this Magazine by a Member of that Noble Family) detailing, for the first time, an account of

The Life and Times of the late Countess of Huntingdon,

Certainly one of the most extraordinary Women of the Eighteenth Century; interspersed with Original Letters, Documents, Anecdotes, and Biographical Sketches of the Royal, Noble, and Celebrated Persons of her day. This Memoir is not only absorbingly interesting as a Narrative, but is indispensable to the Historian; developing, as it does, the origin and progress of the most important and influential Denominations of Dissenters at the present day in this Kingdom; as well as the effects which her Ladyship's indefatigable zeal produced in the reform of the Established Church during the period of her deepest spiritual darkness.

TO ADVERTISERS who have not availed themselves of the publicity afforded by its pages, the REGISTER offers a desirable and almost exclusive medium of publicity, in channels distinct from the Newspapers and other Periodicals, to Advertisers of almost every class. As Magazines are not so speedily thrown aside as Newspapers, but continue to interest and to pass from hand to hand for a much longer period, and are usually bound up in volumes, the chances of the Advertisements they contain being preserved, read, and attended to, are greatly increased. The charges for Advertising will be found lower than any other Magazine; viz. the First Seven Lines (averaging Nine Words in a Line), FIVE SHILLINGS, and Six-pence for every line beyond.

Communications, Books for Review, &c. for the Editor, to be sent to MR. PAINTER, at THE EVANGELICAL REGISTER OFFICE, 342, Strand, LONDON, where only Advertisements will be received until the 27th of each month—if from the country, free of postage.

THE ANDROMETER!

Where is the Gentleman who has not experienced annoyance from the difficulty he has had in obtaining a perfect and comfortably-fitting Suit of Clothes?—The existence of such difficulty clearly demonstrates, that the universally-adopted Systems of Measuring and Cutting are founded on false principles. Convinced of this fact, GEORGE D. DOUDNEY, after a long and assiduous application, has succeeded in the construction of an Instrument or Measuring, and the adaptation thereto of a System of Cutting which, on principles mathematically certain, renders the attainment of AN INCOMPARABLE FIT no longer a matter of doubt, and combines an

EXTRAORDINARY IMPROVEMENT OF THE FIGURE!

The ANDROMETER simply taking for its standard the Figure it is applied to, ascertains the real proportions of it, and is enabled to make such additions as are necessary for improvement, without the danger of their becoming distortions. While the universally adopted systems measure only the lengths and circumference of the body, without reference to its shapes or positions, then draw their proportions from an ideal figure, and therefore inevitably fail to fit all whose symmetry is not in accordance with that standard.—That which renders the ANDROMETER a still more important invention in the Fashionable World, is its stand at the head of a

MESSRS. NEWTON & BERRY

RESPECTFULLY submit their services to Gentlemen interested in NEW MECHANICAL INVENTIONS, as Agents for SOLICITING LETTERS PATENT, IN ENGLAND, SCOTLAND AND IRELAND, FRANCE, the NETHERLANDS, and other Continental States; in preparing Drawings and Descriptions of their INVENTIONS for SPECIFICATIONS; and also in affording advice on legal or SCIENTIFIC points, connected with those subjects.

Patentees are requested to observe, that the Foreign Patents should be obtained before the enrolment of their English Specifications; as, in the event of the subject having appeared in print, the Continental Government will refuse the grant.

WEDGWOOD'S

HIGHLY IMPROVED

PATENT MANIFOLD WRITERS,

FOR

—000—

The invention will enable a person to produce a LETTER, with its FAC-SIMILE COPY, at ONE OPERATION; or, if required, a LETTER, with TWO FAC-SIMILES, to send abroad, with a single pen (style) which, when made of agate, is so durable that it will last for centuries without repair, and actually improves by use.

This invention has obtained the approval of their late MAJESTIES and ROYAL FAMILY, the patronage of His present MAJESTY, and the late EMPEROR of RUSSIA (who was pleased to honour the inventor with a superb diamond ring, of great value, in testimony of his approbation), and has been adopted by BRITISH and FOREIGN AMBASSADORS, and persons of rank, science, and abilities, in situations official and commercial. Also

To enable the Blind to write their letters without any person to look over them.

Manufactory, 4, Rathbone-place, London.

Agents:—G. GALLIE and J. OATES, Glasgow, and J. ANDERSON, JUN. Edinburgh.

CAUTION.—In justice to himself and the Public, it is necessary to state, that there are several spurious imitations of the MANIFOLD WRITER being hawked about, of which daily complaints are made by gentlemen who have had them foisted upon them as genuine, and who, in a very short time, have found, to their mortification, that they have utterly failed. The Public will do well to ask for "WEDGWOOD'S," and see that they have Wedgwood's printed labels and directions in them, the Ink Papers, in all others, being liable to dry up in a short time, and so become useless, particularly in warm climates, and the copying paper becomes rancid and very offensive.

Note.—These additions are vested rights under Policies which have been in existence for five years.

The principles of division which have been adopted are such, that assurers are all placed impartially on the same footing,—each individual having a proportionate share of profit allocated to his policy according to the period of its existence. No distinction is thus made conferring advantages upon parties assuring at any particular period at the expense of those who may enter at another; while at the same time the benefit of those who shall stand long assured with this Company, is provided for by an adherence to the plan of division which has been acted upon so successfully by the Equitable Society and Rock Assurance Company of London.

The advantages of division of profits held forth under the most correct systems of mutual risk are thus realized, whilst, at the same time, the undoubted guarantee of a large subscribed capital affords perfect security for the fulfilment of the Company's engagements under all circumstances, relieving the assured from that anxiety which must naturally exist where they alone are the parties liable to all the risk of an extended business of this nature.

In addition to the advantages offered by a large subscribed Capital, and the equitable principles on which the division of profits proceeds, the Standard Life Assurance Company has to hold forth to the public another regulation conferring peculiar benefit on assurers, which is,—The provision, that a division of profits shall be made among the assured at the expiry of every five years. The importance of this arrangement must be evident to every one, as affording, in the first place, renewed opportunities of minute investigation into the Company's affairs; and, in the second, great advantage to policy-holders, by the frequent additions which will thus periodically be made to their policies.

The other provisions and regulations for conducting the business of the Company are conceived on the most liberal principles for the encouragement of assurance among all classes. The following are among them:—

No charge is made on parties assuring, under the head of entry money, admission fee, or otherwise, as required by mutual Assurance Societies.

Premiums may be made payable yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, according to the inclination of parties.

Military men are not charged with extra premiums, unless called into actual service.

Persons whose lives are assured, are permitted to pass and repay by sea, in time of peace, from any part of Europe to another, without application being made for such license, or payment of any additional premium on account of the same.

No extra premium is charged for foreign residence, temporary or permanent, within the limits of Europe; parties going beyond these limits are assured on reasonable terms.

Onerous assignees to policies opened by persons on their own lives, when duly admitted by the Company as the holders, will be considered to stand in an equally favourable situation as if they had been the original assurers.

Assurances of fixed sums, for limited periods, and on the various combinations of joint lives and survivorships, as well as immediate and deferred annuities and endowments, can be effected on moderate and advantageous terms.

Commission allowed to agents transacting business with the Company.

The object of this Society is to enable parties to provide for their families at less expence than by ordinary Life Assurance, and without requiring the previous death of the Parent.

By the payment of an annual premium for a limited number of years, parents may provide for all their future Children (or for Boys only or Girls only), any sum from £25. to £2,000. receivable on attaining any age from 14 upwards. As the Society takes upon itself the risk of their being few or many children, the Premium is not affected by the number.

Tables are prepared for every age from Fourteen to Twenty-One, inclusive; and the whole have been constructed from calculations which have been examined and approved by an eminent Mathematician.

Example.—A person aged 31, whose wife is 25 years old, by paying £122. 18s. or by an annual premium of £10. for 22 years only (but to cease if the husband should not live so long) or by an annual premium of £8. 3s. 7d. for 22 years certain, may secure to each of his future children £100. on its attaining the age of 21, and in like proportion for any other sum.

By paying a higher rate of premium, the Society will engage to return the premiums they may have received, should no Child be born or live to the given age.

Four-fifths of the profits will be divided among those who endow their future Children.

The Society also endow existing Children on a returnable or non-returnable scale.

The Society grant Annuities to Wives payable after the death of their Husbands. Example.—A person aged 25, by a half-yearly payment of £6. 2s. 9d. would secure to his wife, now aged 20, an annuity of £50. during the remainder of her life after his death.

All other annuities, immediate, deferred, and contingent, are also granted by the Society.

A CERTAIN CURE FOR CORNS AND BUNIONS.

ALLINGHAM'S

ROTTERDAM CORN & BUNION SOLVENT,

WHICH GIVES RELIEF UPON THE FIRST APPLICATION,

AND SPEEDILY ERADICATES THEM, WITHOUT PAIN or INCONVENIENCE, as the FOLLOWING PROVES.

SIR,

Gainsborough, August 25, 1836.

The surprising efficacy of your Corn Solvent on several persons to whom I have sold it, induces me to write for three dozen of the small size, for which I have enclosed the money. Mrs. Egar, of this place, purchased a bottle of me a few days ago. The pain she had previously experienced, rendered her incapable of walking far and sleeping at night: she affirms that, after two applications, the pain and inconvenience entirely left her; and further states that, although she is but a poor woman, that she would give a sovereign per bottle for it, could it not be got for less. Yours respectfully,

T. SPOUNCER.

A further testimony to its merits, no less strong, is offered, by the ingenuity which some unprincipled persons have exercised to imitate its title and appearance, and to substitute for it an article not merely inefficacious, but mischievous; it is therefore necessary to ask for "Allingham's Rotterdam Corn and Bunion Solvent," and see that J. A. SHARWOOD is written on the outside wrapper, as none others are genuine.

Prepared and sold by J. A. SHARWOOD, 55, Bishopsgate-without, London, in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.; and, by appointment, by SANGER, 150, and CHANDLER, 76, Oxford-street; and most Medicine Venders. Any vender not having it, will procure it on its being ordered.

This Company was established for the purpose of carrying on the business of LIFE ASSURANCE, in all its varieties, on the most liberal and approved principles, combining the advantages of a Mutual Assurance Society with the security of a Subscribed Capital. While it gives to the assured the right of largely participating in the Profits of the business, they are totally exempted from the risk which must attend all institutions of the kind where the whole security depends on the business being prosperous, and where the risk of any deficiency must fall upon the Assured.

At the first periodical investigation, in 1835, a BONUS was added to the Policies which had been in existence for five years, and entitled to participate, varying in amount from twenty to thirty-eight per cent. on the premiums paid.

Parties insuring with this Company have the option of participating in the Profits; or of assuring at a lower rate of Premium, without participation.

1. By adopting the former alternative the Assured become entitled to four-fifths of the Profits.

2. If the object be to secure a precise sum, without any share of Profits, this can be done by insuring at the reduced rate of Premium.

In societies on the usual mutual assurance system, the Profits are divisible among all the parties assured, but in this Company, those assured on the participation scheme have the additional benefit of the Profit arising from the Assurances effected on the non-participation system, as well as of all the other Profits of the business.

No entry money, or any other charge beyond the policy stamp.

The improved EYELET HOLE is applicable for LADIES' STAYS, BRACES, WAIST-COAT BACKS, SHIP SAILS, WINDMILL SAILS, MARQUEES, TENTS, BED SACKINGS, TARPAWLINGS, RICK CLOTHS, AWNINGS, SIDE CLOTHS for CANAL BOATS, and all other purposes where the friction of the lace or cord has a tendency to destroy the lace hole worked with the needle.

For Ladies' Stays the improved METALLIC EYELET HOLE is a desirable acquisition, as the tedious process of working the holes with silk is rendered entirely unnecessary; and the mode of fastening them in the Stays is so simple that a child can accomplish it with ease and facility. The price, also, is another consideration, being much lower than working with silk can possibly be.

For Bed Sackings the METALLIC EYELET HOLE is found to be a decided improvement; it has hitherto been matter of complaint that, in lacing the sacking, the cord has so cut and worn it out, as to render it useless in a very short time—by using the METALLIC EYELET HOLE, the sacking will last for generations. The facility and advantages are equally felt with regard to the larger sizes, such as those for SAILS OF VESSELS, &c. The Metallic Eyelet Hole consists of two parts, but, when fixed on, form one entire and perfect Eyelet. Proper directions for fixing them are sent with each order.

C. R. begs leave to return his sincere thanks to those friends who have already honoured him with their commands, and hopes, by unremitting attention and perseverance, to merit a continuance of their favours, and those of the Public generally.

- The great advantage and facility which the SLIDE PRUNING SHEARS possess over every other invention for Pruning, entitles them to the highest praise. By the application of both hands, the Pruner is enabled to cut through, with the greatest ease and sweetness, a branch of at least three inches in circumference. These instruments amputate by a draw cut like a knife instead of crushing the branch, as is done by the use of the common branch shears. The operation is effected by the spring lever (1) and the oblong opening (2), by which a compound motion is produced in the cutting blade (4).

RETREAT, NEAR LEEDS,

THE RECEPTION AND RECOVERY OF PERSONS

AFFLICTED WITH

DISORDERS OF THE MIND.

MR. HARE

Begs to announce to the Profession and the Public that the above Establishment is under his particular superintendance, and that the most strict attention is paid to the medical, as well as moral, treatment of the individuals who are committed to his care.

The Retreat is delightfully situated on rising ground at the opening of Aire-dale, little more than a mile from the town of Leeds; the situation is healthy, cheerful, and also sufficiently retired; the gardens and plantations are extensive; the premises combine proper accommodations for the exercise and amusement of the patients; and the apartments are spacious, lofty, well ventilated, and fitted up in the most commodious manner.

The Establishment is to be considered more in the light of a temporary residence in the country, where the patient is placed while he undergoes such a plan of treatment as may be necessary to restore the functions of the brain, than as an Asylum in the common acceptation of the term: hence it is well suited for persons of weak mind, or who may be subject to fits of temporary insanity, for whom confinement is necessary.

The design and object of this institution are, to afford superior accommodation for the care, and facilities for the cure, of persons labouring under mental disease—to offer the advantage of air and exercise, combined with various sources of amusement and healthful gratification, and at the same time to avoid, as much as possible, every appearance of restraint, the advantages of which must be obvious, especially in mild and incipient cases—and to secure for the Patient a place of safety, conducted on the most humane and enlightened principles, and combining, by proper classification and conveniences, all the comforts of a private dwelling.

Mutual occupation is encouraged by every possible means; every opportunity being embraced and cultivated which can have a tendency to conciliate the esteem and gain the confidence of the Patient, always avoiding the subject of mental aberration, and employing the mind on some other. All circumstances are also strictly attended to which will have a tendency to impart pleasure and contentment, to divert the mind, to awaken and win the attention and affections, to employ the time of the Patients as is most pleasant to them, and shew that their sufferings receive sympathy and commiseration from those under whose care they are placed.

The well known facts—that persons labouring under mania are extremely impatient of restraint, and can scarcely be kept in a tranquil state in their own houses—that they are less disposed to acquire a dislike to those who are strangers than to those with whom they have been more intimately acquainted—that the very change of scene and removal from former habits and associations are often found beneficial to a patient who enters a well-conducted asylum—and, more especially, the circumstance that the disease is constantly becoming more fixed, and will, according to the delay, require a longer period for its removal,—are strong reasons why patients should be placed under favourable circumstances for recovery, as soon as there is an obvious necessity for doing so.

In recent cases a perfect and speedy recovery may generally be expected.

It may be satisfactory to the Friends of those afflicted with Mental Disease to give the following, being the Report of Dr. Mahony,* who visited the Retreat by order of the Secretary at War, to enquire into and report on the case of an individual who is in the Establishment:—

---

September 18th, 1835.

We have this day visited Mr. Hare's Asylum for the reception of Insane Persons:—to some of us frequent opportunities have offered of inspecting similar establishments, not only in England, but in other countries of Europe and America; and we can with truth aver that none in England, nor in any place we have seen, surpass in cleanliness and comfort, and few equal, the house of Mr. Hare, for order and attention to the Patients.

M. MAHONY, Surgeon to the Forces.
C. ANNESLEY, Surgeon, 2nd Dragoons.
ROBT. ATKINSON, Surgeon, Leeds.

* The other Gentlemen accompanied the Doctor.

---

THE REV. JOSEPH WARDLE, A. M. IS CHAPLAIN TO THE INSTITUTION.

---

Applications, either personal or by letter (postage free), addressed, 26, East Parade, Leeds, will meet with immediate attention, and have the most satisfactory references, if required, to Patients already discharged, or their Friends; also to most physicians resident in London, Leamington, Leeds, Scarborough, Sheffield, Wakefield, Bradford, &c. who have had occasion to visit patients at the Retreat.

W. B. PROMOLI,

(LATE THOMAS WOOLFIELD)

The JEWELLERY is of the best London Manufacture, and has given general satisfaction: in consequence, W. B. PROMOLI finds a continually increasing demand, and he is therefore enabled daily to replenish his Stock with the choicest and most fashionable Articles, and to keep a most extensive Assortment, the moderate price of which cannot fail to secure to the Jewellery Department a continuance of the favoured and increasing patronage of the Public.

W. B. PROMOLI begs to assure the Public that the great and unprecedented patronage bestowed upon his Predecessor, THOMAS WOOLFIELD, will incite him to persevere in selecting, both from London and the Continent, such articles of taste and novelty as are likely to be pleasing to an extensive connexion, and to maintain an Establishment in Liverpool decidedly superior to any other single concern in London or the Empire, the choice of goods being greater, their quality the best, and the prices extremely moderate.

IMPORTANT

FOR USING

BETTS'S PATENT BRANDY, IN PREFERENCE TO COGNAC.

- First* :—Because it is declared, on the analyses of many eminent Chymists, to be a more pure and wholesome Spirit.
- Secondly* :—Because it is used in our Public Hospitals, and recommended by the Faculty in the most delicate medical cases.
- Thirdly* :—Because it is certain that, in consequence of its extreme purity, it will not, like French Brandy, produce Constipation, Headache, Nausea, and other injurious effects; a fact acknowledged by all its consumers.
- Fourthly* :—Because the flavour is so similar to that of French Brandy, as to confound the judgment in distinguishing between them.
- Fifthly* :—Because its rapidly increasing consumption, in defiance of prejudice, envy, and every species of opposition, are indisputable proofs of the facts above stated.
- Sixthly* :—Because, being made exclusively from grain, its consumption is beneficial to our Agriculturists, in lieu of Foreigners, who refuse to admit our principal manufactures in return for their Brandy and other products.
- And Lastly* :—Because the price is only Eighteen Shillings per Imperial Gallon; whilst the best Foreign is charged at double that rate.

As Distillers, J. T. BETTS and Co. cannot send out less than Two Gallons of their PATENT BRANDY; which may be obtained, either pale or coloured, at Eighteen Shillings per Imperial Gallon of the highest legal strength, at the Distillery, No. 7, Smithfield-bars, leading to St. John-street, their only Establishment.

HADLEY'S IMPROVED PERUKES.

R. HADLEY,

In returning thanks to the Fashionable World for the liberal patronage he has received, and still soliciting a continuation of their favours, respectfully invites those Ladies and Gentlemen who may have experienced disappointment in their orders elsewhere, and have been led, by delusive promises, to expect a superior article, for which they have paid not only the very highest, but frequently an extortionate price, and at what are considered first-rate makers, and still have been supplied with wigs calculated to fit any head rather than their own, appearing, in many instances, to have been made solely to torture the wearer, to inspect the stock on hand at his establishment, No. 45, BURLINGTON-ARCADE, Bond-street, consisting of several dozens of superior made articles, which, for lightness, ease, natural appearance and good fit, cannot be excelled. Further commendation is rendered unnecessary by the universal satisfaction they are now giving; and the fact that upwards of two hundred hair dressers, including many of the most respectable masters, having, within a short time, asked his permission to see them, coupled with the circumstance of the first Peruquier in New Bond-street offering R. H.'s assistant, on the 15th of March, 1836, constant employment and high wages on the condition only that he could make "HADLEY'S WIGS," is a sufficient proof of their superiority.

R. HADLEY begs to add that, by personally conducting his own business, which he has done for nearly thirteen years (since 1824), his patrons are not subject to inconvenience or disappointment by a change of journeymen, whilst his prices remain very moderate.

Observe!—HADLEY'S, 45, Burlington-arcade, Bond-street, London.

RHEUMATISM.

HIS Majesty's Royal Letters Patent have recently been granted to Mr. COLES for a Medicated Band, which positively cures Rheumatism, Lumbago, Cramp, &c. &c. The Band is worn near the part affected, and may be removed at pleasure. A great public functionary, connected with one of our London Hospitals, whose case, to use his own expression, had baffled every medicine that was quack, and every medicine that was not quack, has sent Mr. Coles his written testimonial, which may be seen at 3, Charing-cross; wherein he admits that Mr. Coles's Rheumatic Bands have completely subdued his disease, and he declared there was not a man upon the face of the earth who had more reason to be grateful to another than he had to Mr. Coles. Mr. ———, Secretary to the Duke of ———, has likewise worn Coles's Bands, and although his sufferings were severe and of long standing, the relief was almost instantaneous. Lord Skelmersdale had a coachman suffering a martyrdom to this complaint, who declared (when he paid Mr. Coles) ere he had worn the Rheumatic Bands five days, he was more free from pain than he had been during the preceding five years. The Duchess of Sutherland's gardener, Mr. John Soar, could not walk from West Hill, Surrey, to order the Rheumatic Bands, but he was able to walk that distance (twelve miles) to pay for them, and back again; and he begged Mr. Coles would let the world know that.

"To Mr. Coles—Sir,—Having been afflicted with Rheumatism thirty years, and severely so for the last nineteen months, two of which I was in St. George's Hospital, and I have since been confined to my bed six weeks together under surgical treatment, during which time I was bled fourteen times, besides blistered and cupped, and employing other remedies said to be infallible for its cure; but all to no purpose, as I could scarcely rise from my chair or walk the length of my room. Whilst in this state of suffering a friend procured your Patent Rheumatic Band, and I can truly say that it has afforded me a hundred times greater relief during the five weeks I have worn it than all the other remedies put together, and I am now able to resume my business, to the great astonishment of all that know me.

Harrow-on-the-Hill, 25th April, 1835.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
JOSEPH HOLDER FRESHWATER."

Mr. T. Frank (grazier), of Kibworth, Leicestershire, in a letter dated 27th June, 1835, says, that he has been a great sufferer at times for many years past, and severely so about a month since, when a friend procured him Coles's Patent Band, which relieved his sufferings in two days, and in less than three weeks entirely removed the complaint.

Benjamin Cole, footman to Sir Robert Peel, in a note dated 29th June, 1835, says, that he has suffered the most excruciating pain in his back and loins from Rheumatism, for six weeks, and finding no relief from surgical treatment, had recourse to Coles's Rheumatic Band, which afforded him almost instantaneous relief, and in three weeks entirely removed the complaint.

Joseph Clay, Esq. of Arden Mills, Denton, near Manchester, in a letter dated 2nd July, says:—I have received the Rheumatic Bands, the whole of which I have worn since May last, and I have the pleasure to state that they have relieved my sufferings in my shoulders, wrist, knees, and hip. I still feel weak in my ankles, but on the whole I think, by persevering with them, they will make me young again.

The Rev. Mr. Wilder, of Carlton rectory, near Newmarket, in a note dated 20th October, says that he has suffered very severely from Sciatica, for more than two years, and about three weeks since, he obtained one of Coles's Medicated Bands, and the pain has, during the short time he has worn it, nearly, if not entirely left him, he had tried many supposed remedies without receiving any benefit.—Read "Coles on Rheumatism," published at 3, Charing-cross, and sold by Sherwood & Co. and William Strange, in English or French, price One Penny, and extracts from which will be found in the "Dublin Directory," in Pigot & Co.'s London, Scotch & Irish Directories, in the "Royal Blue Book," and in "Boyle's Court Guide," for 1836.

Lieut.-Col. Histed, 3rd Regiment of Light Dragoons, informs those who have the Rheumatism, that he has worn Coles's Medicated Bands four months, and that they have relieved him from a state of suffering scarcely to be described. The Colonel, to evince his gratitude to Mr. Coles, had authorised him to make use of his name in any way he thinks proper.

4, Craven-street, Strand, London, 29th of April, 1837.

Lieut.-Col. A. M. Maxwell, 36th Regiment, has also worn Coles's Band, and given him a similar testimonial.

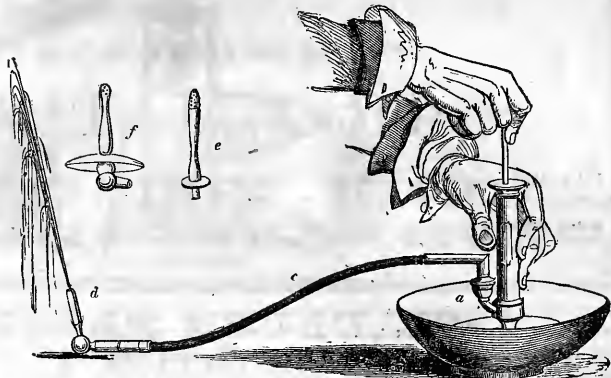

To persons afflicted with that painful and dangerous disease, Hernia, the Trusses of Mr. Coles's invention are the best, 3, Charing-cross, Truss Maker to his Majesty's forces. From the numerous testimonials borne to the excellence and simplicity of his Patent Truss by the first practitioners in surgery, including many cases of actual cure published in "Coles's Gazette," it is gratifying to learn that the victims of this distressing malady are thus rescued from their sufferings.

* * * Read the case of the late William Cobbett, Esq. M. P. in "Boyle's Court Guide;" "Coles's Gazette," on Rupture; published and sold by Sherwood & Co. and William Strange, London. Each One Penny, or Sixpence per dozen; published also in French, as above.

They support a wider pipe, thereby causing a constant, steady and powerful blast into the fire, and are thus calculated to bring iron or steel into a state of fusion without burning it.

BLACK LEAD PENCIL

MANUFACTURER,

23, Church-street, Spitalfields,

LONDON,

After many years of perseverance and study, has at length succeeded in inventing the CRETA LÆVIS, or Smooth Permanent Chalk Pencil, in various colours, which will blend together with or without water. This article has, for some years past, been a desideratum with all who profess the fine arts. They have been tried by most eminent Artists, and acknowledged to be the best that could have been produced.

The Creta Lævis Pencils are decidedly the best for sketching from Nature, and will also imitate water colour drawings, by which means, the same sketches may be finished off to advantage; they are compact, in a small case, and may be carried to any distance without inconvenience; neither will they sustain any injury from change of climate, and may be shipped to all parts of the world with safety. E. W. anticipates the universal approbation, and hopes to meet with the encouragement, of Artists, Stationers, Merchants, &c.

He also begs the attention of Merchants, Fancy Stationers, Booksellers, &c. to his genuine CUMBERLAND LEAD PENCILS, as they are superior to, and cheaper than, any manufactured in England. All the degrees are carefully attended to, and answer accordingly. Having had nearly forty years' experience in this business, and being especially careful as to quality of lead, he has gained the confidence of several eminent Wholesale Houses, noted for being very particular in that respect.

E. W. likewise recommends his PURIFIED and PREPARED Cumberland Lead Pencils, for Artists and Schools, they being entirely divested of grit, or any foreign substance.

BRANDRETH'S VEGETABLE PILLS.

ADDRESS TO THE PUBLIC.

DR. BRANDRETH'S CELEBRATED VEGETABLE PILLS.—All diseases arise from the one simple cause—an impurity in the blood, which impedes its circulation by settling on some organ or part, and immediately illness ensues. These Pills correct, purify, and invigorate the blood, causing it to circulate freely, and giving to every organ healthy action. They are the original Vegetable Medicine, and have the highest claims on the patronage of a liberal and discerning Public.—DR. BRANDRETH, the original discoverer, not having decided on their present formula, until after thirty years' experience and laborious research into the medicinal properties of the numerous plants composing the Vegetable Kingdom; his object being to compose a Pill that should at once purify and produce, by a specific action, an equalization of the circulating fluid;—and whoever may feel disposed to give these Pills a trial, will at once find that this object is attained.

SMOKE CONSUMING FURNACES,

STEAM BOILERS.

We beg to call the public attention to the utility and advantage arising from the adoption of our newly Patented Boilers and Furnaces—applicable to steam power of every description. We have three Patents for improvements in Boilers, and three distinct Patents for improvements in Fire Places. The advantages to be obtained from the Boilers, are—generating steam more expeditiously in half the space,—less expense, and more durable. The Furnaces are so improved for Steam Boilers—by introducing an Auxiliary Boiler, which forms part of the Furnace, giving great increase of power, and not liable to get out of repair. Our Furnace, applicable to Locomotive power, has been proved, at Liverpool, to require but  $\frac{1}{4}$  Coke to  $\frac{3}{4}$  Coals—to obtain steam more expeditiously without smoke. By this novel arrangement, the tubes and boiler will be protected to a great extent; and the economy, from the use of coals, will exceed one-third of the entire cost of fuel.

This Furnace will prove of the greatest importance, for all Manufacturing purposes, particularly to those where the blacks from the smoke are so injurious—which, by our improved Furnace, are completely consumed.

The Patent Auxiliary Boiler and Furnace can be added to any Steam Boiler now in use, without unseating it—a considerable increase of power is obtained, and an economy of fuel effected from fifteen to twenty-five per cent.
